Auto Bomb Death Ruled Murder in Arlington

Authorities Sift Wreckage of Car In Which Electrical Sign Contractor Died

By Dorothea Andrews and Donald Olesen
Post Reporters

The wreckage of the Nash sedan in which 30-year-old William Anthony Denekas was blasted to death yesterday was combed thoroughly by Arlington police last night for clews to the brutal murder.

The explosion death of the handsome electrical sign contractor was ruled murder "at the hands of person or persons unknown" by Coroner W. C. Welburn of Arlington County late yesterday.

Denekas met his death shortly after 11 a. m. yesterday when he tried to start his car, which was parked in front of 5837 N. 21st st., where he lived.

A blast which sounded to a neighbor "like a bomb going off" rocked the area. Glass and bits of metal from the car sailed as far as 150 feet.

Dr. Welburn said a preliminary examination of the body showed the force of the explosion shattered the pelvis and broke both legs. He said the man's face had been pitted with gravel forced upward by the blast.

Police Chief Harry Woodyard said that investigation disclosed either TNT or dynamite was used for the blast. He said there were traces of wire leading to the distributor, but no bomb traces. He said the device was so arranged that the first kick of the starter would set off the bomb. The explosive, he said, could have been attached by an amateur.

Arlington detectives, accompanied by Sergt. Sheldon R. McKee, Washington police bomb expert, last night made an exhaustive inspection of the wrecked Nash sedan without reporting any further evidence in the tragedy.

With McKee were Police Chief Woodyard and Detective John Sanders. In their search, they ripped out the seat linings, and probed into the car's engine and interior without success.

After checking the automobile, Arlington detectives spent 5½ hours questioning about 15 persons whom they described as "friends or associates" of the dead man, but admitted they made little progress.

When the questioning ended at 11:30, detectives said there still were no suspects in the case.

Detective Chief C. Burns Pressley said the questioning was devoted principally to learing Denekas' movements in the last few days. He said most of the persons questioned were "young people," and included five girls.

Pressley also disclosed that two Arlington Detectives Louis Elliott and Dudley Rector had gone to Harrisonburg, Va., for B. L. McDaniel, a recent business associate, to bring him here for "routine questioning."

John Harrison, a neighbor, who lives at 5829 N. 21st st., had to saw Denekas loose from the car with a hacksaw. Denekas died in an ambulance on the way to Arlington Hospital.

With bits of metal from the car, gunpowder dust found in the road beside the car, and fingerprints on the hood, police set about establishing the cause of the blast.

Detective Sergeant Pressley then declared, "We are proceding on the theory that it is murder. It could hardly be anything else."

The blast had missed, by a few minutes, maiming or killing Mrs. Margaret Baldwin, 5845 N. 21st st., who with her 5-month-old son, Stephen, had just walked by the car.

Harrison, who freed the dying man from the car, placed the time of the blast at 11:05. He said he had been listening to his favorite radio program (on at 11 o'clock) for "just a few minutes" when the explosion came.

It ripped the flooring out of the right, front side of the 1941 Nash, blew open all four doors, stripped the dash board grill of everything movable, tore the front seat from

House to Get Housing Bill Next Week

Measure to Come Up Without Provision For Public Housing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A housing bill—without public housing—is scheduled to come to the House floor for action next Monday or Tuesday, Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) disclosed last night.

The House Banking and Currency Committee chairman said he would ask for an open rule on the measure. This means the bill would be open for amendment, so that if advocates of public housing have sufficient strength such a provision can be added from the floor.

House GOP leaders believe they have the votes to beat down an attempt to amend the bill to make it similar to the Senate-passed Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, which calls for 100,000 low-cost public housing units annually for the next five years.

Swift Switches Likely

Wolcott, however, declined to speculate on the chances of House adoption of public housing provisions. In this election year there are apt to be some swift switches of votes in connection with housing.

Public housing advocates will have two cracks at getting adoption of their program—once on the House floor and again in the inevitable conference between House and Senate, since the Senate has passed the bill continuing a public housing provision.

Wolcott said he was calling an executive session of his committee Thursday to consider proposed legislation.

The House leadership has given the green light for the measure to come up Monday or Tuesday at the very latest, he declared.

The House measure will unquestionably contain the so-called Title VI extension, which has passed both houses in different form.

The Title VI Federal Housing Administration's home loan insurance program will be extended for about a year with authority to insure approximately two billion dollars additional loans. At least half of that amount must be allocated to rental housing. The FHA will probably guarantee up to 90 per cent of the loans.

The House measure also is likely to switch the secondary mortage authorization of the Senate bill from the Senate's National Home Mortgage Corporation back to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The House measure probably will restore 250 billion dollars to RFC for maintaining the Federal National Mortgage Association, which holds secondary mortgages for RFC under existing legislation.

Also contemplated is special assistance to veterans' cooperatives. Under the Senate-passed measure,

Knifing, Shooting Sends Freighter Back to Honolulu

Honolulu, June 7 (U.P.).—The Liberty freighter Angus McDonald turned back to port today when a crewman was knifed aboard ship, and then a pantryman was shot as the vessel neared a pier where newsmen and port officials waited.

Capt. C. D. Snodgrass said the third mate had been placed in irons after he wounded the ship's steward. Snodgrass said the steward was taken to the captain's cabin, from which he escaped with the captain's gun. He started firing as the ship neared the dock. Officials of the Coast Guard and the Federal Bureau of Investigation who went aboard reported that two men were removed to Tripler General Hospital.

Those Who Arise Before 5 May See Comet—If It's Clear

Weather and alarm clocks permitting, Washingtonians should be able to see the Honda comet before it's completely outbrilliianced by the sun.

The comet, already viewed by Ohioans, has been hidden from local astronomers by cloudy skies, said Father Francis Heyden, assistant director of the Georgetown University astronomical observatory.

And each passing dawn is cutting down chances for a good view, declared Father Heyden, who estimated the display will be absorbed by daylight "within a couple of weeks." If you're up before 5 a. m., he said, look for the comet above the northeast horizon.

It's due some time after 4:45 a. m., said Father Heyden.

The comet, believed first discovered by a Japanese astronomer named Honda, is now less than an hour ahead of our sunrise, is only about 30 degrees above the horizon, and is moving about one degree a day towards the sun, the sky-watcher said.

2 Candidates Join Fight for Full Aid Fund

Dewey, Stassen Back Vandenberg Drive to Get House Slashes Restored

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and former Gov. Harold Stassen threw their influence yesterday into the fight to restore the cuts made by the House of Representatives in foreign aid funds.

Dewey has seldom jumped into congressional battles in the past, but yesterday he felt strongly enough about the House cuts to issue this statement from Albany:

"The original authorizations for the European and China recovery programs were, in my judgment, the proper amounts required for the great purposes of these programs.

"I earnestly hope that the amounts which have been cut will be restored, thereby maintaining the confidence of the peoples of the free world in our good faith and leadership.

Resentment Justifiable

"There has undoubtedly been waste and improvidence in the handling of the huge foreign relief funds in the past and this has aroused justifiable resentment. The new program, however, has been carefully built in the legislation passed by both houses of Congress, and there is reason to believe that the abuses of the past will stop.

"A good administrator will spend only what is needed to do the job. As I have repeatedly said, it is better to appropriate the full amount and give the administrator the tools with which to work than to handicap him at the very outset."

Stassen made his statement in Hartford, Conn., and put it into stronger language. He told a press conference that full restoration of the Marshall Plan cuts was more important to the Republican Party than what its delegates might do at the coming convention.

He added that he was urging his friends in the Senate to back up Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) on this question.

Given Important Backing

Both statements gave important outside backing to Vandenberg in his fight to get the cuts restored. They also showed that Dewey and Stassen were not content to let Vandenberg get the full credit for saving the European recovery program, if he should succeed in convincing the Senate to repair the deep slashes made last week by the House.

Vandenberg planned yesterday to make only a brief statement when he appears before the Senate Appropriations Committee to plead for a restoration of the full $5,300,000,000 authorized by Congress last April. The Michigan Senator was reported last week to be "fighting mad" over what the House had done, but felt, apparently, that he should save his thunder for the coming debate on the subject in the Senate.

To Hear Marshall, Hoffman

The Senate Appropriations Committee will also hear Wednesday from ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and Secretary of State Marshall. The Secretary has already said that the cuts made by the House would reduce the whole program to a mere relief operation.

[The New York Herald-Tribune said that Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), committee chairman, has pledge that foreign aid funds including those for the European recovery program, Greek-Turkish

Western Allies Reveal Plan for Governing Non-Soviet Germany

Last Strong Link With West

Benes Resigns as President Of Red-Ruled Czechoslovakia

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 7 (AP). — Eduard Benes, Czechoslovakia's last strong link with the west, resigned as President today rather than approve a new constitution drawn up by the Communists. Communist Premier Klements Gottwald was regarded as the leading choice to succeed him.

Benes, 64, had held the post for 11 years in two terms.

His resignation was accepted at a special meeting of the cabinet and announced by Gottwald.

In a short letter made public by the government Benes said he decided May 4 to resign and had so informed Gottwald. The letter said:

"At this time we discussed my decision and all the problems of the whole political situation and I told you also that my doctors had advised me to heed my present condition of health."

Benes expressed the wish the people and their government "shall live together and work together in tolerance, love and forgiveness, and that they should vouchsafe for everyone liberty and use that liberty conscientiously."

The phrasing gave the Communist-dominated government the excuse, spread abroad during the last two weeks, that the President was resigning because of his health which has been bad during the last year.

But the wording, mild as it was, also carried the implication that Benes disapproved of the constitution and of the recent Communist-dominated single ticket election. An unopposed, hand-picked slate for Parliament was elected May 30 by voters in a flat yes-or-no election. Every difficulty was set up for those who voted no.

Benes was the second President in Czechoslovakia's history. In 1946 he was elected to serve for life.

He first became President in December, 1935, after Thomas G. Masaryk resigned because of age and illness. Benes had been Masaryk's Foreign Minister 17 years and helped him found the Czechoslovak republic.

Benes resigned once before—in 1938 after the Munich conference brought the German invasion—but reassumed the Presidency in London, July 21, 1940.

Last February a Communist coup sharply reduced Benes'

French Approval Is Major Point Of Doubt; Moscow Blast Expected

Post Reporter

The western allies yesterday published their long-awaited plan to set up a provisional government in western Germany, whether Russia likes it or not.

Their plan, agreed upon in London after six weeks of discussion, was the most far-reaching and daring step yet taken to go ahead without Russia in the revival of beaten and partitioned Germany.

Until now western Germany, occupied by three armies and divided into three zones, has been governed by 11 "laender" or States with weak authority.

Recovery has been crippled by Russia's refusal to let her eastern zone join in the economic unity of Germany as a whole. The nearest thing to a German government has been the bizonal economic administration in the American and British zones, with overriding powers in the economic field alone.

Still Far From Fact

If the new plan is adopted—and it is still only a "recommendation" by delegates of the United States, Britain, France and the Low Countries—a western German government will be in operation early next year, with wide legislative, executive and judicial powers.

More than that, there will be an international authority of the six western countries and western Germany to divide the coal, coke and steel of the Ruhr among Germany and her western neighbors.

The British cabinet yesterday accepted the plan; formal approval by President Truman and Secretary Marshall is expected to follow soon. But in France, with its memories of three German invasions in 70 years, there was anxiety and dismay, and a 50-50 prospect that Foreign Minister Georges Bidault may be repudiated when the plan comes before the Chamber of Deputies Wednesday.

Even if Bidault is upheld, the plan is likely to invite a new crisis in relations with the Soviet Union. The blast of protest from Moscow is expected to be more intense than any former Soviet protest against Allied actions in western Germany.

Red Drive Expected

It was thought possible yesterday that the Russians would renew their efforts to get the western allies out of Berlin—a contingency for which American and British chiefs of staff are already prepared. Gen. Sir William Morgan, the British member of the Combined Chiefs of Staff, returned yesterday from a secret visit to London, leading to the supposition that the military consequences of the German plan were thoroughly discussed in London before the agreement was reached.

As if anticipating Soviet truculence, the agreement published yesterday contained the solemn assurance that the western powers would not withdraw their occupation forces from Germany "until the peace of Europe is secured."

The agreement also reaffirmed the present disarmament and demilitarization of Germany, and promised that even after the end

Anti-Poll Tax Rider Voted Into Draft Bill

Senate Refusal of 6 Changes Hints End Of Civil Rights Action

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Senate last night wrote an antipoll-tax amendment into the draft bill after turning down six prior attempts to tack other civil rights riders to the measure.

Approval of the last of the racial rights amendments—by a 35 margin—cleared the major obstacle to passage of the military manpower bill.

While other controversial changes still are unsettled, Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) said he hoped for a final vote late today or Wednesday. If approved, the bill then goes to the House.

Believed All for This Year

Adoption of the soldiers and sailors' antipoll-tax proviso was followed by forecasts from both sides of the Senate that it would be the only civil rights legislation passed this year.

Senate Republican leaders lined up almost solidly against application of the major planks of President Truman's civil rights program to armed forces. They were offered by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and "tabled" or voted down decisively by the Senate yesterday.

But on the seventh vote, Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), GOP policy chief in the upper house, threw his weight behind the proposal and it was carried. The proviso bans payment of a poll tax as a requirement for any serviceman voting for President, Vice President, United States Senator or Representative.

Says Understanding Violated

Acting Minority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) charged the GOP leadership support of the antipoll tax amendment violated an "understanding" the Democrats had with the Republican chiefs. That was, he said, that all of the Langer civil rights proposals would be shelved or defeated. Taft denied there was any such agreement.

Senator Lucas said he viewed the GOP leaders hip-backing of the anti-poll tax amendment with "amazement and amusement." He declared that it was clear to him from yesterday's action that the Republicans did not plan any fur-

Seaborne Aid Sent Egyptians In Isdud Trap

Reinforcements Land In Effort to Break Ring of Israeli Troops

Cairo, June 7 (AP).—Egyptian commanders landed seaborne reinforcements in an attempt to break the noose Israeli troops have thrown around Egyptian infantry and armor at Isdud, a Tel Aviv dispatch said tonight.

Perhaps 1000 of King Farouk's troops—a fifth of the Egyptian force which threatened Tel Aviv from the south—are caught in the trap.

The account quoted persons returning from the front as saying at least one and possibly several Egyptian ships took part in the amphibious operation. Isdud is 21 miles down the coast from Tel Aviv, the capital of Israel.

Jewish leaders previously announced their troops had blunted an Arab threat to Tel Aviv from the northeast.

Arabs 8 Miles From City

The informant in Tel Aviv said the Arabs had established still a third position threatening the capital. At one point those Arab units were only 8 miles east of the city.

Israeli units are exerting enough pressure to hold the Arabs along a 12-mile front reaching from Er Ramle to Ras Al Ein, the informant said. The closest Arab units were at Wilhelma, just inside the Jewish coastal strip.

The Egyptian Defense Ministry said their troops captured the settlement of Miesanim, on the coast between Majdal and Isdud, and killed or wounded 220 Jews in a battle which began at midnight Sunday. A communique added that 110 Jews were taken prisoner.

Neither to Get Advantage

While Israel and Arab troops fought in widely scattered sectors of the Holy Land, a neutral source said tonight in Cairo that Count Folke Bernadotte has promised in his proposals for a Palestine truce that neither Jews nor Arabs will gain military advantage from his administration of the four-week respite.

Bernadotte, the United Nations Palestine mediator, advised the U.N. Security Council today that he hoped to report Wednesday on the success or failure of a cease-fire.

Bernadotte gave Jewish and

Beardsley, Gross Take Lead in GOP Iowa Primary

Des Moines, June 7 (AP).—Gov. Robert D. Blue and Representative John W. Gwynne found themselves in tight spots on the basis of early returns in Iowa's Republican primary tonight.

Totals from 510 of 2469 precincts gave State Representative William S. Beardsley a 37,190 to 23,355 lead over Blue.

Beardsley had backing from the Iowa Farm Bureau which used the airplane and rural party line to get out the vote.

In the Third congressional district, returns from 108 of 313 precincts gave H. R. Gross, former Waterloo newscaster, a 7617 to 6328 lead over Gwynne.

Other incumbents, meanwhile, were building up decisive leads in the chief contested races.

Incumbent GOP Senator George A. Wilson, who did not leave Washington to make a personal campaign, was leading John N. Calhoun, 44-year-old war veteran, 19,816 to 10,121, with 352 precincts in.

Capitol Hill Cloakroom Talk Ruled Immune From Law Suit

Congressmen can't be held responsible for what they say in their Capitol Hill cloakrooms any more than for their utterances in the House itself, a District judge ruled yesterday.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough ruled such cloakroom conversations "privileged," or immune to lawsuit. But what a Congressman tells a reporter over the telephone is another matter, the judge declared.

He dismissed those portions of a slander and defamation suit brought against Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) by Brig. Gen. Herbert C. Holdridge, U. S. Army (retired), over conversation in which [illegible] referred to Holdridge as a "crackpot." Holdridge is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

Justice Goldsborough, however, refused to dismiss those parts of the lawsuit charging the Congressman with slander and defamation of character in allegedly telling a news service reporter by telephone that Holdridge was "crazy." A libel charge in the same matter was dismissed as not applicable.

General Holdridge, self-announced candidate to succeed President Truman in the White House, has asked $100,000 damages.

The Supreme Court split twice in upholding claims of civil rights yesterday.

A California law that put Japanese out of the fishing business fell by a vote of 7 to 2.

Samuel Saia, who works for the City of Buffalo and preaches for the Jehovah's Witnesses in his spare time, set up a loud speaker in Outwater Park, in Lockport, N. Y., in 1946. He was fined and jailed because he did not have a loud speaker permit from the police chief.

Justice Douglas yesterday spoke for a bare majority of the justices, who thought Saia had a right to use his loud speaker, and the city has no right to jail him for it. The Lockport law, said the justice, was against the Constitution and void on its face.

Douglas made it plain that a city may have rules about the hours a loud speaker may be used,

A 7-to-2 Supreme Court vote yesterday put an end to fears that thousands of out-of-State divorces were no good.

Chief Justice Vinson held—for the majority—that all States must respect divorces granted by any State if:

1. Both the husband and wife were before the court granting the decree;

2. Both had a chance to question the court's right to hear the suit; and

3. The State granting the divorce would not allow it to be attacked in any other suit.

The ruling rested on the Constitution, which says the States must give full faith and credit to the acts of the courts of other States. Set aside were two rulings of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, which held divorces granted in Nevada and Florida were no good, because there was a Massachusetts law against them.

Chief Justice Vinson's ruling did not settle either way the status of divorces granted when

Truman, Five Days on Road, Sees Nomination Already His

By Edward T. Folliard

Sun Valley, Idaho, June 7.—President Truman, welcomed to Idaho as a "scrapper," paused in his cross-country swing today to loaf for a while in this opulent Rocky Mountain resort.

Mr. Truman, the First Lady and Margaret were quartered in the personal cottage of W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador-at-large to the 16 Marshall Plan countries in Europe. Harriman built the teal-blue Swiss cottage when he was chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad, which operates Sun Valley.

This afternoon Mr. Truman, along with other "dudes" from Washington, rode to the top of Half Dollar Mountain in a swaying and bouncing chair of the lift. He also tried his hand at fly-casting and skeet-shooting. He fired three times and missed. Finally, he employed a proxy, Secret Service Agent Jerry Behn, who shattered the plaster disc on his first try.

After five days on the road, certain political facts are clear, including these:

Whatever others may think, Mr. Truman regards the 1948 Democratic presidential nomination as

Eduard Benes Man of Achievement In a Career Darkened by Frustration

The story of Eduard Benes, who yesterday resigned as president of Communist-dominated Czechoslovakia, is one of frustration.

Twice he had seen his country freed from foreign domination—and twice experienced the tragedy of its return o chains.

Czech President Forced Out

EDUARD BENES
Resignation Announced

There are those who hold the short, slight, 64-year-old Czech patriot partly to blame. They say he has shown an intellectual confusion, a moral uncertainty, and they point to how he bowed to Hitler's demands in 1938 and to his acceptance, as a fait accompli, of the recent Communist coup.

It is true that, bereft of Anglo-French support as a result of the Munich sellout, he obeyed Hitler's demand that he resign as president.

It is equally true that, aging and ailing, he bent to Communist pressure last February and reluctantly approved a cabinet loaded with Communists, and remained as President.

But Benes' career as one of the founders of the Czech Republic and its leader in the years immediately preceding and after the last war shows that he achieved much for his country—not by attacking when there was no chance of success, but by counter-punching as the opponent weakened from initial exertions.

For Benes, son of fairly prosperous Bohemian farmer, is a thinker and a scholar rather than a warrior. His weapons have been the pen and a personal integrity which won him and his country the support of powerful western nations.

There is nothing colorful about Benes. In appearance (frail, sparse grey hair) and manner (quiet, studious), he could be a stage interpretation of a typical professor.

Perhaps the one arresting thing about the man is his eyes—sad, brooding, as those of a man who had seen great suffering.

In keeping with the rest of his makeup, he neither drinks nor smokes. But perhaps the best indicator of his personality is the utter lack of anecdotes concerning him.

Like her husband, Mrs. Benes is self-effacing and has had little public part in her husband's career.

It was while a student at Charles University in Prague before the First World War that Benes met Thomas G. Masaryk, then a professor of philosophy.

The two men differed on religious questions—Benes had turned away from Catholicism. But they met on common ground in the matter of nationalism—of freeing their country from Austro-Hungarian oppression.

When war broke, Benes who had achieved a reputation as a writer in the Social-Democratic press in Paris, intensified his collaboration with Masaryk. He returned to Czechoslovakia and, with Masaryk, formed a secret revolutionary organization.

Obliged to Flee

With police closing in, both were finally obliged to flee—Masaryk to London and later to the United States; Benes to France, where he became secretary of the Czech National Council, spearhead of the liberation movement.

Due in large part to Benes' propaganda efforts, the French Government recognized the National Council, which at the war's end, formed the Czech government recognized by the Allies.

Thus, at 34, Benes became Foreign Minister under President Masaryk. The next 18 years were fruitful ones. In that time he formed the Little Entente with Rumania and Yugoslavia and achieved alliances with France and the Soviet. He also served as president of the League of Nations Council and its Assembly at various times. He became Czech President in 1935 when Masaryk resigned due to illness.

All these achievements were trampled down in a few short weeks by Hitler's marching columns.

There followed another flight—first to the United States and a lecturing post at the University of Chicago. Later he went to England to head the refugee government in exile.

With the war over, he returned, weary but triumphant, to Prague.

Now he is stepping out of the picture sick and bewildered at the blow given his dreams power. A short time later, Jan Masaryk, son of the first President and Benes' Foreign Minister, was found dead. The Communist government called it suicide.

Gottwald's office said Benes will receive the presidential country home at Lany, 24 miles from Prague, as a tribute to his work. His presidential salary will continue for life.

The President receives an annual salary of $60,000 and expenses of $66,000. Although it was not specifically stated, it was believed the salary figure was the one which would be continued.

Czechoslovakia's Parliament, which now contains no anti-Communist elements, will elect a new President June 14.

If Gottwald is elected, the premiership may go to Antonin Zapotocky, Deputy Premier and head of the trade unions. There still is talk that 70-year-old Zdenek Nejedly, Education Minister, or Zdenek Fierlinger, Minister of Industry, might be chosen President and that Gottwald would remain as Premier.

The news of Benes' resignation—Czechoslovaks called it an "abdication"—was given to the country for the first time in a 7 p. m. broadcast.

Exiled Czechs Are Not Surprised

London, June 7 (U.P.).—Exiled Czechoslovakians, most of them former members of parliament, predicted today the Communists will prevent President Benes from leaving the country.

They said his resignation was no surprise.

A British foreign spokesman expressed "sorrow" at Benes' resignation. They said he personified the Czech liberal tradition.

Papanek Says Benes True to Convictions

Lake Success, N. Y., June 7 (U.P.) Dr. Jan Papanek, former Czechoslovak representative to the United Nations who quit in protest to last February's coup, said today that Dr. Eduard Benes resigned as president of Czechoslovakia because he could not betray his convictions.

"Dr. Benes, having been threatened, continued in office after the February coup in order to prevent bloodshed and an invasion of Czechoslovakia by the Red army," Dr. Papanek said. "He soon realized, however, that he could not stay unless he was prepared to betray his convictions.

"All of his friends and supporters were purged, jailed, forced to flee or killed," Dr. Papanek added.

SIX-POWER PLAN—Six western powers yesterday proposed a separate federated state in western Germany (shaded area), to be fashioned out of the occupation zones of the United States, Britain and France. The Ruhr would be internationalized

Agreement on Germany

Here is a summary of agreements reached in London by representatives of the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg regarding the future of Germany:

Report to the Six Governments

1. The role of the Benelux countries:

The western military governments in Germany will keep close association with the Benelux representatives (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg) on matters affecting Benelux interests, and will keep them informed of developments in the western zones.

2. Western Germany's role in the European economy:

(a) There must be a close association of the economic life of western Germany and western Europe since western Germany has been included in the European Recovery Program.

(b) An international authority shall be set up to control distribution of coal, coke and steel from the Ruhr, so that Ruhr industries shall not again become an instrument of aggression, and so that the Ruhr can contribute to the recovery of all ERP countries including Germany itself.

(c) The principle of nondiscrimination against foreign interests in Germany shall be reaffirmed, and an inter-governmental group be set up to make recommendations on the subject.

3. Evolution of political and economic organization of Germany:

(a) The German people must have the opportunity "to achieve on the basis of a free and democratic government the eventual reestablishment of German unity, at present disrupted." Accordingly, the people in the various states shall be free to set up their own governmental institutions. Each state shall be authorized to choose delegates to a constituent assembly to draw up a constitution. If the resulting constitution is federal rather than centralized, if it protects the rights of the respective states and at the same time provides for "adequate central authority" guaranteeing individual freedoms, it will be submitted for ratification by the people in the respective states.

(b) The foreign trade of the three western zones shall be jointly conducted and controlled. A complete economic merger of the American, British and French zones cannot take place until further progress has been made in setting up German institutions in the three-zone area.

4. Provisional territorial arrangements: Proposals will be submitted to the six governments for "certain minor provisional territorial adjustments" along Germany's western frontiers.

5. Security:

(a) The United States, United Kingdom and France will not withdraw their forces from Germany until the peace of Europe is secured, and without prior consultation. They will consult if any of them sees a danger of German military resurgence or aggression.

of the occupation period there would be strict controls to make sure that Germany could not commit aggression again.

As the western powers see the situation in Germany, there was no alternative but to go ahead in spite of Soviet objections and refusals since the end of the war.

An official State Department explanation yesterday said that the new plan "does not exclude the participation of eastern Germany (the Soviet zone) whenever the people of that area are free to join."

"At this critical stage," the statement declared, "only constructive measures, not procrastination, can offer hope for an eventual German settlement."

Copies of the agreement and its annex on the Ruhr were handed to Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin in London and the Soviet military governor, General Vassili Sokolovsky, in Berlin just an hour before the documents were released for publication.

Procedure, If Approved

Here is how the new plan will be carried out, assuming that the Allied governments approve it:

First of all, the military commanders in the three western zones will meet with the ministers-president of all 11 States in western Germany, and will let them call a constituent assembly to write a western German constitution.

Each State will choose delegates according to procedure to be decided by its legislative body.

The assembly will be free to write its own constitution with only two limitations: one, that it shall not reconstitute a centralized Germany, like Hitler's, but "a federal form of government which adequately protects the rights of the respective States"; the other, that it shall also provide for "adequate central authority" and guarantee individual rights and freedoms.

Provides Referendum

If the new constitution meets these tests, the military governors will let it be submitted to the people of the states for ratification.

Thus the western Allies have gone boldly ahead to settle an issue on which two long meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers had been deadlocked—first in Moscow in the spring of last year, then in London last winter.

As the State Department explained it yesterday: "Germany's part in the European recovery program can only be administered by a competent German government. The Soviet Union has consistently blocked any agreement on a German government able to participate in a program for German and European economic recovery. The western powers have now met this challenge."

The new agreement on the Ruhr was also an attempt to act where repeated meetings of the foreign ministers had failed. It marked acceptance of the French, Belgian and Dutch insistence that Germany's western neighbors must have a voice in allocating the products of the Ruhr, the former arsenal of Europe.

French Not Satisfied

The new plan fell far short, however, of what the French originally wanted — namely, international management and control of all Ruhr industries. The Ruhr authority will simply control the distribution of coal, coke and steel as between Germany and her western neighbors.

The veto power, so troublesome in German bodies on which Russia is represented, will be abolished in this case. Decisions will be by majority vote, with three votes each for the United States, Britain, France and Germany, and one each or Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The third main section of the agreement, dealing with military security, made no direct mention of possible Soviet aggression or of the new defensive union being formed by Britain, France and the Low Countries.

The State Department expressed the belief yesterday, however, that the new guarantees would prove "ample for all contingencies which can now be foreseen."

The special interests of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg were provided for in two sections of the agreement. One pledged close association between these three governments and the American, British and French military governments in western Germany. The other called for a preliminary survey of the frontiers of western Germany, where all three of the little western neighbors' have asked for small bits of territory.

The agreement provided, however, that final delimitation of the western frontiers must await the final German peace settlement.

French Government Faces 6-Power Pact Test

Paris, June 7 (NYHT).—Friends of the French government believed here tonight that it would survive the wave of protest against its foreign policy that has been developing since the close of the six-power London conference on Western Germany.

The test will come in the National Assembly this week, with Communists and the followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle joining to oppose the London decisions which were made public today, and which the French cabinet is expected to approve Tuesday.

Whatever happens it appears the outcome will be close, for observers doubt whether Foreign Minister Georges Bidault will get by with more than 10 or 12 votes to spare.

The London report is not popular here and, insofar as control of the Ruhr is concerned, it is more onerous than was first believed.

German Communists Open Attack on Pact

Frankfurt, Germany, June 7 (AP). Communist attacks on the six-power agreement on western Germany's future began here tonight.

A Communist statement declared the agreement "brings about a new menace of war for Germany and the entire world."

Although the issue of divided Germany is close to the average German's heart, the general reaction from Frankfurt's man-in-the-street seemed to be: "Just another agreement—I would rather know when currency reform is coming."

Scientists, Military War Over Secrecy

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A new row between the Armed Services and the Federation of American Scientists has developed over censorship and security regulations governing atomic scientists.

Back of the rumpus are orders by the Army, Navy, Air Force and the Research and Development Board to the Nation's laboratories to refuse to answer a questionnaire by the federation's committee on secrecy and clearance.

The secrecy committee is made up of research scientists at Cornell University. Its questionnaire sought data from laboratories in industry, universities and Government departments as to:

1. In how many laboratories and under what circumstances has the procedure of investigating the loyalty and associations of employes been introduced?
2. What criteria and methods were used in making decisions?
3. The extent to which loyalty investigations are required for men doing non-secret research.

The inquiry was started last November, the June issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists reports. About 40 per cent of the 140 laboratories addressed have already replied, the Bulletin states, which calls the response "a high return for a mail questionnaire."

"Some of the most secret of all laboratories—such as the atomic bomb laboratory at Los Angeles—gave us a candid and complete account of their special problems," the committee reported.

One of the forms went to the David Taylor Model Basin, a naval laboratory in Washington. The director referred it to the Chief of Naval Operations. Soon the committee had a report from Rear Admiral Inglis, Chief of Naval intelligence, in which Inglis said:

"The answers to many of the questions would be of a classified character. The completed questionnaire cannot be returned to you."

Later the committee reported Inglis refused to state which parts of the questionnaire were in the classified category.

Later, it states, the Army Ordnance notified "a university which had no Army contract whatever, and a contract for specifically unclassified work with the Office of Naval Research" that answers to part of the questions would constitute violations of the Espionage Act. It asked all who had answered the questions to notify the Army at once. The Air Force also sent similar warnings to all its contractors.

The specific questions the Army objected to asked:

1. What contracts the laboratory had with the Federal Government, and what part of its facilities was engaged in such work.
2. What Government agencies the contracts were with.
3. Whether the projects were classified.
4. The type of clearance required by the Government agency for employes engaged in the work.

On February 19, the report says, the Research and Development Board notified all its consultants to refer all such questionnaires to it before answering them.

"There are in existence today a large number of organizations whose objective is to gather such information and later use it as material for propagand and 'smear' programs in an attempt to discredit the United States form of Government" F. H. Richardson of the Research Board is quoted as telling consultants.

The committee referred to these warnings as a sign of "the Prussian disease." It said the services and RDB are "worried not about any military security but about criticism—criticism of the often arbitrary and already much criticised procedures of clearance.

"The use of the legitimate function of military security to suppress public discussion of administrative malpractice is not new, but it is always dangerous," the statement said.

ECA Wants Aid Needs Revised

Paris, June 7, (NYHT)—Europe's recovery plan for the three months ending September 30, 1948, will require considerable revision before it receives the approval of the American Economic Co-operation Administration, it was learned today.

W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador-at-large in Paris, is reported to feel that screening of individual national requirements by the 16-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation should have been far more vigorous.

The quarterly plan, completed by the OEEC last week and now under study by Harriman's staff, is accompanied by a letter explaining the pressure of time prevented the European organization from doing as good a job as it wanted in revising individual lists of requirements. The covering letter added that the organization wanted to submit follow-up notes of modifications to ECA.

Herve Alphand, director of economic affairs at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and head of the French delegation to OEEC, led the European criticism of the organization's first rushed effort and urged OEEC to go beyond rubber-stamping national plans next time and to come up with a true continental program.

Notable examples of plans that are likely to be reconsidered either by the OEEC or by Ambassador Harriman's ECA staff include:

1. Purchase of tobacco for the German bizone from the United States rather than from Turkey.
2. Belgian purchases of phosphates from America rather than from North Africa.
3. Shipments of dried fruit to Bizonia from the United States rather than from Greece.

Czech-Soviet Uranium Mine Pact Disclosed

Paris, June 7 (NYHT).—A secret treaty between Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia, giving the Russians absolute control over uranium production from the famous Bohemian mines of Jachymov (Jochimstall), was signed in Prague in October, 1945, Ivo Duchacek, former chairman of the foreign relations committee of the Czech Parliament, revealed today.

The Russians have ousted the Czechs from all positions of influence in the mines and have installed their own engineers and scientists at Jachymov to direct "feverish" excavation of uranium for Soviet atom-weapon research, Dr. Duchacek said.

The mines produce the only uranium in Europe. With ore from these mines, the Curies produced their first radium in 1898. According to Dr. Duchacek, who escaped from Czechoslovakia on foot into the Bavarian forests early in March, the Russians have established "an autonomous uranium enclave" in the Czech mining town of Jachymov, a few miles from the spa at Garlsbad.

Czech miners are not considered reliable enough, Dr. Duchacek said, and the mines are being worked by German prisoners recruited in the Soviet zone of Germany. The effect of the treaty, Dr. Duchack said, was to transfer all Cech sovereignty over these mines to the Soviet government.

Dr. Duchacek first learned of the existence of the secret treaty between his government and Russia in January, 1946, when he was a member of the Czech delegation to the United Nations Assembly meeting in London. He felt himself obliged to withhold any publicity about the treaty until after the one-ticket elections in Czechoslovakia put a formal end to his parliamentary duties and obligations last week.

aid and assistance to China, will "not be hit with a meat ax," as he feels they were in the House. However, the paper said Bridges was described by informed sources as feeling that Administration witnesses, during the three weeks of hearings held thus far by his committee, have failed to justify some items in the legislation.—Editor's Note.]

Meanwhile, Vandenberg picked up open support from Republican and Democratic colleagues. Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), a member of the Appropriations Committee, said he would do everything in his power to get the cuts restored.

"A completely adequate, soundly administered recovery program, not a mere relief program, is our best hope for winning a lasting peace," he said.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Congress could not afford to "change this program from rehabilitation to relief."

Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) said on the floor that Congress would "play into the hands of Russia" if it upheld the cuts made by the House.

From the Democratic side, Senator Alben E. Barkley (D., Ky.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, called the House cuts "awful," and Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), minority leader of the committee, said he was prepared for a last-ditch fight to get them restored.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Senate Republican policy committee, was more cautious. He said he would reserve judgment until "we see what the basis for the House cut is."

Former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson issued a statement on behalf of the Committee for the Marshall Plan calling the cuts "wholly inconsistent" with what Congress did in authorizing the program last April. He estimated that the House had reduced the program by nearly two billion dollars and predicted that its cuts "would undo the good work that has been started in Europe and would be a blow to international trade and our own national security."

Anti-Poll Tax Section Passes

ther effort to put through civil rights legislation this year.

Southern Senators—who had promised a filibuster that might block passage of the draft if the civil rights program were tacked onto the bill—indicated last night they would accept the decision on the poll tax amendment.

Not Important Enough

Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.), said the poll tax change was "not important enough" to warrant endangering the selective service bill. He said he believed most Southern Senators would support the measure despite the change.

The amendment provides:

"No person inducted into, or enlisted in, the armed forces for training and service under this Act, shall, during the period of such service, as a condition of voting in any election for President, Vice President, electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Member of the House of Representatives, be requird to pay any poll tax or other tax or make any other payment to any State or political subdivision thereof."

Taft, in supporting the proposal, declared it is similar to a provision adopted during the war. Senator Gurney, on the other hand, opposed the move on the ground it had not been approved by his committee and that the wartime antipoll-tax bar had been part of a general plan for absentee soldier balloting.

Favors Separate Bill

He declared that Congress should pass another such bill rather than add merely a part of that act to the draft bill as a rider. Earlier, Gurney had opposed Langer's other civil rights amendments on the ground they involved a "basic national question" which should be considered separately and not as a rider to the draft.

Gurney declared the armed forces now are meeting "the so-called racial question intelligently" and in accordance with a "long-range evolutionary plan." Adoption of the Langer amendments now, he said, would create a morale problem in the services "over night" where little or no problem now exists.

Reads 1944 Platform

Langer's first amendment—to abolish segregation in the armed forces—was shelved 67 to 7, on a "motion to table" offered by Gurney. After GOP chiefs backed Gurney's move, the former read the 1944 GOP platform, promising an end to racial discrimination in the military services.

"Not one thing has been done by any party to carry out that pledge," shouted Langer.

"This is the last chance we have to carry out that 1944 platform. The Republicans will have an awful time with people whose votes they want because they don't keep their campaign promises."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) supported Langer, but declared "it is clear that Congress and the people of the United States are not ready for the civil rights proposals." He urged, however, that GOP chiefs support part of the program—anti-lynching or anti-poll tax legislation.

By voice vote, the Senate turned down several other Langer amendments. They included prohibition of "jimcrowism" on interstate carriers and in restaurants, requiring military contractors to abide by FEPC rules, and a ban on training troops in States having Jim Crow laws.

Another—making the lynching of a man in uniform a Federal crime—was tabled by a record vote of 61 to 7.

Tidelands Bill Under Discussion By Senate Group

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday discussed, but took no action, on legislation to give the States clearcut ownership of the land and mineral resources under their coastal waters.

A similar bill has passed the House.

The Supreme Court has held that California does not own the oil-rich land under her coastal waters, that the Federal Government's clai mis paramount.

Sponsors of the legislation contend this decision overturned a long series of precedents, and that Congress should pass a law giving up Federal claims.

Senate Group Fails to Act On Mundt Bill

The Senate Judiciary Committee took no action at a meeting yesterday on the House approved Mundt-Nixon bill to require registration of Communists.

Chairman Wiley (R., Wis.) told reporters the committee still has not received opinions on the constitutionality of the measure. It has asked them from Attorney General Clark and a number of private attorneys.

British Hint Tassoyev Was Russian Spy

London, June 7 (U.P.)—Official suspicions were aroused today that Britain was playing host to a Russian spy when Lt. Col. Y. D. Tassoyev made his controversial visit to Britain in April and May.

The belief grew in informed circles that Tassoyev actually was a secret agent assigned to find the route of the "freedom road" over which dissatisfied Russian officers and officials are fleeing.

Tassoyev, former chief Soviet reparations officer at Bremen, was in London from April 24 until mid-May. The British said he came here of his own volition after seeking asylum as a political refugee, and was returned to Germany at his own request. The Russians charged yesterday he was kidnapped, jailed and mistreated by Britons seeking to force him to renounce his Soviet citizenship.

Only One Who Returned

Informed Britons said hundreds of high Soviet officials and officers in Germany have come over to the western Allies in recent months. Tassoyev is the only one who has asked to be returned, these sources said.

The Soviet charges that Tassoyev was kidnapped by Americans after a tea party in Bremen and forcibly brought to London, were contained in a Tass dispatch released by Moscow Radio yesterday. It was the first statement from Moscow on the incident. At no time was Tassoyev quoted directly.

Foreign office spokesmen expressed surprise at the failure of Russia to make a formal complaint about the case, because of the grave accusations made by Tass. The spokesmen denied charges Tasoyev was subjected to "unprecedented tortures" before he was released.

No Attempt At Release

The Foreign office also said the Soviet government made no attempt to obtain Tassoyev's "release" at the time of his alleged "abduction."

Even the London Communist Daily Worker did not accept the Tass dispatch without question. Its headline on the story said: "Did M I Five (British Intelligence) Kidnap Soviet Colonel?"

But the Tass story contained just enough information to set people to wondering just what did happen during Tassoyev's month sojourn in Britain.

The London address to which Tass said Tassoyev was taken—is to 23 Bishop Kings rd.—contains an apartment which has been sublet to War Office Military Intelligence.

Chinese to Move Factories

Nanking, June 7 (AP).—The government announced plans today to move factories out of North China, now menaced more than ever by a sweeping Communist movement through Shantung province.

Premier Wang Wen-hou told a meeting of the Kuomintang (Government party) that certain factories would be shipped hundreds of miles south beyond the Yangtze, which cuts across central China.

There in South China, he said, they can operate without interference from the civil war.

The drastic move was part of a broad program he outlined for vigorous prosecution of the war. The program includes leaning heavily on new U. S. aid to balance the budget and to finance the war.

Some members of the national legislature attending asked: "What will happen to North China if the industries are removed?"

Some of those attending said President Chiang Kai-shek, who was presiding, cut off the questioners sharply.

As Wang spoke, press reporters from the front told of new reverses in Shantung province. Here the Communists threaten to lop off the vital area of Peiping and Tientsin which lies to the north.

The dispatches said there was fighting in the outskirts of Tsinan. That Shantung capital was "in a full state of war."

Government Wool Stocks Cut in Half

United States Government-owned stocks of wool, under pressure of a world-wide shortage, have dwindled in the last 12 months from more than 500 million pounds to about 225 million.

In the same period prices have gone up sharply. Better grades that sold for 45 cents a pound a year ago in the grease, are now bringing around 80 cents.

Most of the Government stocks are coarse grades. Although the commodity of god quality, the main demand in this country is for fine grades to make the lighter fabrics American consumers want.

In appropriation funds for the Ecomomic Cooperation Administration last week, the House Appropriation Committee provided that none of the money could be spent for wool except the Government-owned stocks of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Officials of CCC yesterday said that about 100 million pounds of medium wool can be made available at once.

Shipment of this coarse wool to Europe will provide clothing as badly needed in parts of Europe as food, a CCC official said.

Little Value For Export

Although good for domestic use on the European continent, where coarser fabrics have always been more popular than in this country, it will be of little value in restoring Europe's export trade. There is virtually no export demand for fabrics from the cheaper wools.

The United States is a large importer of fine wool. The total wool clip in this country is about 225 million pounds a year—only half of which is of the finer grades. American textile manufacturers are using between 800 million and a billion pounds of wool annually. Most is imported from Australia.

Wool production in this country is at a low ebb. Sheep and lamb stocks are the lowest since 1868. Higher wool prices may encourage some increase in sheep raising, experts say, although prices of mutton and lamb are so low compared with feed prices that little evidence of an imminent increase is yet noticeable.

Trade Plan Extension Voted Down

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday cleared the way for Republican limitations on the President's tariff-making powers by thrice refusing on a party-line vote to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements program in its present form.

In lieu of a straight extension, Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) moved a one-year continuation of the law, with the Tariff Commission granted authority to recommend nonmandatory tariff limits.

The Millikin "compromise," reputedly reflecting the views of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), eliminates House provisions for a congressional "veto" of rates in excess of what the Tariff Commission recommends.

Law Handicap Seen

But it still grants the Tariff Commission a new and independent role in tariff-making that committee Democrats charge would slow down and handicap the operation of the law.

Slated for a committee vote today, the proposed "compromise" would not require the President to follow Tariff Commission findings. But if he failed to do so, he would have to send a message to Congress within 30 days, explaining why.

The House-passed bill carried the limitation one step further, by giving Congress authority to disapprove within 60 days any trade agreement that went beyond the commission's tariff highs and lows.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) told reporters he still prefers the House version. Taft and Senator Albert W. Hawkes (R., N. J.) asked more time to study the Millikin-Vandenberg compromise, and at their request the committee vote went over until today.

Favorable Report

Prospects are that the compromise will be favorably reported by the committee today, even if Republican members split. Democratic members were reported ready to vote for it if necessary to get the issue before the Senate.

The present reciprocal trade authorization runs out June 12. Millikin told reporters his goal is to get the bill on the Senate calendar by tomorrow and back to the House before Saturday.

At yesterday's meeting Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) offered three separate motions to extend the act "as is" for three, two and one year periods. Each was defeated by a 7-to-6 straight party vote.

George later told reporters he is opposed to the projected compromise (1) because it lifts the Tariff Commission out of the interdepartmental reciprocal trade setup; (2) requires it to hold separate hearings and reach separate "judicial" determinations, and (3) "places undue emphasis on tariff protection."

"The Tariff Commission of necessity would have to proceed very slowly and in my opinion a full year would elapse before it could pass on all the items entering a single trade agreement," said George. "If we are going to do that we might as well abandon the act."

Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) also stressed the time element, and asked:

"How will it look to the world if we reverse our foreign economic position on the heels of the House cut in ERP?"

But Millikin told reporters it was "just bunk" to say the compromise is "crippling." The Coloradan said the Tariff Commission is already set up to do a "briefing" job on tariff rates. He argued the additional load would be light, since no new trade agreements are immediately in prospect.

Reds Ask Observer Role in Palestine

Lake Success, June 7 (AP).—Russia made her first open bid today to send military observers into Palestine.

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, told the United Nations Security Council he had heard that governments on the Council's truce commission had been asked to supply observers. They are the United States, Belgium and France.

He said that Russia is ready to send her observers also.

Gromyko thus brought into the open for the first time a question which has troubled several powers in the United Nations ever since the Palestine question arose. It is this: Can the United Nations stop the fighting in Palestine by force without having to include Red army troops?

Surprised Security Council delegates promptly put off talk about observers until Thursday afternoon at least. Then they cabled home governments for instructions.

The Council, meanwhile, received a report from the United Nations mediator in the Middle East, Count Folke Bernadotte of Sweden, saying he hoped to tell the Council Wednesday whether he has succeeded or failed in bringing about a four-week armistice in the Jewish-Arab conflict.

Egyptians Land at Isdud

Arab authorities his proposal for getting the projected four-week truce in operation. The Jews agreed to a series of suggestions by the U. N. mediator on immigration controls—one of the points holding up agreement.

The Israeli government said it would segregate immigrants of military age entering Palestine during the armistice. The Jews also agreed to notify Bernadotte in advance of transport arrivals and to bar entry of armed immigrants.

The other major point in dispute has to do with the Arab blockade of the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv road—the supply line of 90,000 Jews besieged in the Holy City. The Jews demand that this highway be opened.

Inconclusive fighting broke out along that road again today at Latrun, 14 miles west of Jerusalem. The Holy City itself was rocked by mortar and artillery fire. The Arab Legion was answering Israeli fire at a ratio of 10 shells for one.

Ahmed El Rawi Pasha, Iraq's Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, said the Arabs "are insisting on acceptance of their conditions." He did not elaborate but presumably the conditions had to do with immigration and the road blockade.

Truce Unlikely This Week

It appeared unlikely that fighting in the Holy Land could be brought to a halt during the week. The Arab League's political committee is not scheduled to meet in Cairo before Saturday. That body is expected to thresh out the Arab decision on the truce.

Heavy fighting occurred in the "thumb" of Palestine above the sea of Galilee. Syrian and Lebanese troops drove into the area from two sides. They may be trying to seize this portion of Israel and hold it for bargaining purposes should the truce be arranged in the next few days.

Apparently Israel has little choice but to go along with whatever Bernadotte has proposed. A Tel Aviv dispatch reported a disagreement in the Israeli cabinet over acceptance of a cease-fire on any compromise yet advanced.

The dispatch added, however, that the Israeli government is known to be trying by all means short of a sacrifice of its statehood to comply with the United Nations request. The government wants to avoid placing itself in a position in which sanctions or other adverse international action might be invoked.

The same considerations also might have weight among the Arab states.

Lie Sends Nine More Officials to Holy Land

Lake Success, N. Y., June 7 (U.P.).—United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie suddenly dispatched nine more secretariat officials, including his chief personal aide, to Palestine to help U. N. Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte in his efforts to stop Holy Land fighting.

The fact that Lie's top aide, William Stoneman, was included in the party testified to the importance Lie attached to the party's mission.

Among the others in the party, which left LaGuardia Field by plane this afternoon, were Frank Begley, Henri Vigier and J. Cebe-Habersky.

High Court Upholds Big Steel Merger

Merger of the eight million dollar Consolidated Steel Co., with the United States Steel, network was upheld over Government protest by a 5-to-4 Supreme Court vote yesterday.

The court split 5-to-3 in ordering longshoremen paid for overtime work at time and a half their premium rate, a ruling involving several million dollars in claims.

A third ruling of wide business and industrial effects ordered nine companies to stand trial in Los Angeles on charges of trying to grab control of small bus lines.

Consolidated Steel runs six plants in California and one each in Arizona and Texas.

Justice Reed wrote the majority decision, which held that the Justice Department failed to persuade the court that the proposed sale of the firm violated national public policy as stated in the Sherman Act.

Reed reported that the Government's argument in some instances "takes us into highly speculative situations." He said that United States Steel was of impressive size.

"Size has significance in an appraisal of alleged violations of the Sherman Act," Reed said. "But the steel industry is also of impressive size and the welcome westward of that industry requires that the existing companies go into production there or abandon that market to other organizations."

In dissenting, Douglas said the case was the most important under the antitrust laws which has been before the court in years. Douglas added:

"It is important because it reveals the way of road of monopoly power—the precise phenomenon at which the Sherman Act was aimed.

"Here we have the pattern of the evolution of the great trusts. Little, independent units are gobbled up by bigger ones. At times the independent is driven to the wall and surrenders . . ."

Longshoremen won a decision in the United States Circuit Court in New York that the "overtime" pay of $1.875 was not overtime wages within the meaning of the wage-hour law, but that the higher rate was the "regular rate of pay." Thus, the longshoremen contended they were entitled to payment, for work over 40 hours weekly, at one-and-one-half times the $1.875 rate.

This decision was appealed to the Supreme Court by the Bay Ridge Operating Co., Inc., and the Huron Stevedoring Corp. Justice Department attorneys argued the case on their behalf.

Justice Reed gave this instruction for finding how much each longshoreman is entitled to:

"Each respondent (longshoreman) is entitled to receive compensation for his hours worked in excess of 40 at one and a half times his regular rate, computed as the weighted average of the rates worked during the week. In computing the amount to be paid the petitioners (the employers) may credit against the obligation to pay statutory excess compensation the amount already paid to each stevedore which is allocable to work in those excess hours."

Max R. Simon of New York, counsel for the longshoremen, said in a statement:

"The overtime claims in these cases are peculiar to the stevedoring industry, and would not apply to any others. The court has ordered the cases back for a consideration of the defenses provided in the Portal to Portal Act, and these defenses will substantially reduce our recovery. The Portal Act also puts a brake on new suits along this line, so this decision will have a very narrow effect. The exaggerated estimates which are being made are utterly fallacious. The court itself has questioned their accuracy. We estimate that all recoveries resulting from this decision will total less than 5 million dollars."

The companies in the bus case include General Motors, Standard Oil Co. of California, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., and Mack Manufacturing Corp.

Civil Rights Cases Settled

and how loud it may be. And a city may provide for getting out permits to use such devices, so as to avoid having two of them blare into the same park at one time. But he found no such reasonable rules in the Lockport law, where a man's right to make himself heard—without going to jail for it—hung on whether the police wanted him to be heard.

"Loudspeakers are today indispensable instruments of effective public speech," said Douglas. "The sound truck has become an accepted method of political campaigning. It is the way people are reached. Must a candidate for Governor or the Congress depend on the whim or caprice of the chief of police in order to use his sound truck for campaigning?"

The majority thought not.

Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Rutledge, Murphy and Black joined in the decision. But Justices Jackson, Frankfurter, Reed and Burton dissented.

Jackson said the majority was making free speech both ridiculous and obnoxious. Both he and Frankfurter dwelt on the right of others not to listen, if they didn't want to, and said the loud speakers destroyed this right. Both felt that the local community ought to have the last word in controlling loud speakers and the like.

The fishing decision grew out of an appeal filed by Torao Takahashi, who came to America more than 40 years ago and nearly ever since has been a deep sea fisherman, out of Los Angeles. When war came, Takahashi went to an internment camp and his sons and sons-in-law—four in all—went into the Army.

While he was interned, California passed a law, saying no alien who couldn't become a citizen—that is, no Japanese—could get a fishing license.

This law can not stand, Justice Black said yesterday for the Supreme Court. All persons in America have equal rights, said Black, and the Constitution protects aliens as it does citizens.

Justices Reed and Jackson did not agree.

All the justices agreed on most of a third decision which invoked the Constitution. They threw out a South Carolina law which taxed shrimpers from other States $2500 a year for fishing off Carolina's coast, and taxed Carolina fishermen only $25, besides making the out-of-State fishermen bring their catch to Carolina ports.

Court Rules on Divorces

only one of the parties is before the court granting them, and the other is told of the suit by mail.

Here are the two Massachusetts cases settled by the justices yesterday:

Martin Y. B. Coe and his wife Katherine were married in 1934, and lived in Worchster, Mass., until 1942. Then Mrs. Coe won a legal separation in Massachusetts and her husband went to Reno, taking along his secretary, Dawn Allen, and her mother. When Coe sued for a divorce, Mrs. Coe went to Reno, hired a lawyer and fought the suit. The husband won a decree; the wife won $7500 and $35 a week. Coe then married Miss Allen.

Margaret E. Sherrer married Edward C. Sherrer, and they lived in Monterey, Mass., until 1944. Then the wife went to Florida with their two children. After some months, Mrs. Sherrer sued for a divorce and her huszand came to Florida, hired a lawyer and fought the suit. She won her divorce; her husband won custody of the children during the school yeaf. Soon afterward, Mrs. Sherrer married Henry A. Phelps.

When they went back to Massachusetts, the newly weds were met by court actions, in which the Massachusetts high court threw out their divorces, on the strength of a Massachusetts law, which says:

"If an inhabitant of this Commonwealth goes into another jurisdiction to obtain a divorce for a cause occurring here while the parties resided here, or for a cause which would not authorize a divorce by the laws of this Commonwealth, a divorce so obtained shall be of no force or effect in this Commonwealth."

This law was passed in 1835, and was based on rules in force long before.

Mr. Vinson said the public policy of Massachusetts in its own affairs—as shown by the old law—was no concern of the Supreme Court; that was the State's own business. But the Constitution does not allow one State to go so far in enforcing its policy as to make its courts the final judges of the acts of the courts of other States. He added that it was true that divorce cases often decide matters vital to those involved in them, as well as to the State. But he found this just another reason that there should be an end to divorce cases, so that when once decided they stay decided.

Justice Frankfurter was joined by Justice Murphy in a long dissent.

Frankfurter said everybody knew some States make an industry of easy divorce laws, bidding for business among people who live in more rigid States. He said yesterday's ruling was a boost for this industry, and was bound to encourage persons to commit frauds, and to get together to evade the divorce laws of their home States.

Two other cases decided yesterday placed a limit on the scope of out of State divorce decrees. Two New York wives got legal separations from their husbands, with these decrees they got support money. Joseph Estin was ordered to pay his wife, Gertrude, $180 a month; Louis Kreiger was ordered to pay his wife, Helene, $60 a week. Both husbands went to Reno and got divorces. Then they stopped paying the support money, and claimed that a lawful divorce wiped out all orders given in other decrees, such as those for legal separation.

The New York Court of Appeals held that the husbands would have to go on paying, and the Supreme Court upheld this ruling by a 7 to 2 vote yesterday.

Justice Douglas said for the majority that the New York court ruling on the State law was binding on the Supreme Court; that if the State's policy allowed a legal separation order to survive a full divorce decree, then it survived. The Nevada law holds the other way, but Douglas said the Nevada law could not be imposed on the New York courts.

Justices Jackson and Frankfurter dissented. Jackson said that if the Nevada decrees—which were not attacked as far as divorce was concerned—were to be given force at all, they ought to be given full force.

Third Crest Piling Up in Oregon Flood

Portland, Oreg., June 7 (AP).—Hot weather sent the snow-fed Columbia River surging up toward a third flood crest today.

The Weather Bureau warned the lower river valley that it was not yet halfway through a flood that already has claimed 26 lives, left 60,000 homeless and caused an estimated 140 million dollars damage.

Forecasters could not yet say whether the new crest would climb past the first surge that reached 30.3 feet—15.3 over flood level—shortly after destroying Vanport eight days ago.

The Red Cross today listed 715 persons still unlocated since the city of 18,700 was shattered, but cautioned this did not mean the Vanport toll would climb from the two known dead in that disaster.

Officials appealed for those on the list to register with the Red Cross. Earlier 52 were listed. Most have reported their safety since, the Red Cross said.

The river, now in its 19th day of flood, battered at dikes at the 29.9 foot level today—14.9 feet above flood stage.

It will drop a few inches in the next two days. Then it will begin climbing toward a crest as yet unsighted.

Elmer Fisher, the Weather Bureau's river expert, was hopeful it would stop short of the first 30.3 foot reading, but could not forecast beyond Friday, when it is expected to reach 29.7 feet.

He warned of high water for at least three weeks to come.

Col. O. E. Walsh, district Army engineer, said: "The corps of engineers has every hope that the dikes will hold."

He warned, however, of a long fight ahead for weary dike workers who in frantic day and night labor have been plugging repeated break-throughs with rocks, brush and sandbags.

There are three major down-river danger points. The first is north and east of Portland where 13 miles of dikes protect a 35-million-dollar aluminum plant, dairy land, the Portland airport, four golf courses and homes of several thousand persons.

The next is in the Longview-Kelso area of Washington where four diking districts protect farm land and part of the city of Longview.

The third is in the Clatskanie area of Oregon, where a small dike broke yesterday, flooding several farms and trapping two families who refused to leave.

House to Get Housing Bill Early Next Week

cooperatives established by World War II veterans were entitled to 95 per cent loans.

A special provision for aid to severely paralyzed wheel-chair veterans—paraplegics — will unquestionably be incorporated in the House bill. Under the Senate-approved measure, Federal grants were authorized up to $10,000 to pay half the cost of special homes for these crippled veterans. The House will receive a similar proposal.

Just how much of the Senate-adopted 286-million-dollar loans and grants for rural housing will go before the House is still uncertain.

At yesterday's hearings James W. Rouse of Baltimore, representing the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, lauded the Baltimore plan to clean up and prevent the development of slums by adequate law enforcement.

Under the Baltimore plan, landlords are forced to repair and put into minimum condition substandard dwellings. There are 27 patrolmen assigned to Baltimore's inspection service, and a special Housing Court has been established to try violators.

Dirksen's Committee Lauds His Services

House District Chairman Everett M. Dorksen (R., Ill.) has made it a practice to give complete reports to the press on activities of the District Committee.

But yesterday he held mute.

He said not a word of the fact that committee leaders had paid him war personal tribute for his service in the committee an din Congress, which he is leaving after this session.

"FIFTEEN EXCITING YEARS"

a history of the New Deal, world war, the dawn of the atomic age

ON June 13, 1933, when Eugene Meyer assumed ownership of The Washington Post, he stepped in at the beginning of what proved to be the most exciting fifteen years ever recorded by any newspaper. Think back! World-wide depression, the New Deal in America, the dictators' efforts to enslave the whole world, the War, the United Nations, the breaking away of India and of the East Indies from the British and Dutch Empires, and above all, the release of Atomic Energy.

Now on the fifteenth anniversary of the purchase of The Post, a special, 24-page historical section will be published to commemorate these exciting years. It will be intensely interesting; a record that everyone will want to read and keep; of particular value to high school and college students, to teachers, and to all parents.

The running story of the period is told by Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post. Other members of the staff have written on their specialties: sports, women, labor, agriculture, and others. And there is page after page of pictures, telling the story in the quickest, most dramatic and memorable way.

Lodge Heads GOP Platform Makers

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.) last night was picked for the key post of resolutions chairman of the Republican National Convention.

Republican National Chairman Carroll Reece designated Lodge temporary chairman of the GOP's platform-drafting group.

His election by the resolutions committee is expected to follow after the Republican convention organizes in Philadelphia June 21.

Selection of Lodge, the second Massachusetts Republican named to a top convention office, was regarded as a victory for the bipartisan foreign policy views of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R. Mich.)

The 45-year-old Lodge, whose grandfather led the fight against American entry into the original League of Nations, left the Senate to serve in a tank detachment during World War II. On his return to the Senate, Vandenberg supported him for a seat on the Foreign Relations Committee. He backstopped the Michigan Republican in putting interim aid, ERP and other major foreign policy measures through the Senate.

Reece asked the Resolutions Committee to meet in Philadelphia June 17, four days before the convention opens, for open hearings on the platform. Hearings will continue through the following day. The committee then will divide into subcommittees to start writing a platform that will be submitted to the convention June 22.

Other top offices in the convention already have gone to Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.), and Gov. Dwight Green of Massachusetts.

Republicans had some trouble in filling the resolutions post. Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) said he would be busy with Senate business and couldn't accept. Later sentiment was reported veering to Senator Edward Martin (R., P.) but Martin's "favorite son" status ruled him out.

Florida Democrat Delegation Elects Anti-Truman Chairman

Tampa, Fla., June 7 (U.P.).—Florida's delegation to the Democratic National Convention today elected an anti-Truman chairman who will support Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for the presidential nomination.

Frank D. Upchurch, former State senator of St. Augustine, won the chairmanship as successor to Senator Claude Pepper. Pepper had headed the Florida delegation at the last two conventions, but his "Loyal Democrats for Eisenhower" slate made a poor showing in the May 4 primary, placing only five delegates.

Candidates pledged to Wright won 17 of 18 places on the delegation and will control 11½ of the group's 20 votes. Three other delegates are members of a group headed by Gov. Millard Caldwell, which also opposes Truman but does not favor a break with the Democratic Party. And three others ran both Pepper and Caldwell tickets.

Oklahoma to Send Uninstructed Group

Oklahoma City, June 7 (U.P.).—The State Democratic Convention followed its leaders today and voted to send Oklahoma's 32 delegates to the National Convention uninstructed.

Without mentioning President Truman's name, the 1600 delegates stuck to the line prescribed by State party leaders last week.

The delegates adopted without dissent the unit rule, which forces the delegates at Philadelphia to accept majority decisions and vote as a unit.

Richmond to Greet Dewey, Stassen

Richmond, Va., June 6 (A.P.).—Harold E. Stassen is scheduled to be in Richmond Wednesday night, a spokesman for the former Minnesota Governor said tonight.

Stassen, Dewey To Visit Baltimore

Baltimore, June 7 (A.P.).—Harold E. Stassen and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey will visit Baltimore this week in a bid for Maryland's support for the GOP presidential nomination.

Dewey plans to be here tomorrow. Delegates to the national convention are to meet him at an evening dinner.

The former Minnesota Governor Stassen, will fly to Baltimore Thursday. He, too, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be attended, among others, by the delegates.

Warren Leaves For New York

Sacramento, June 7 (U.P.).—Gov. Earl Warren leaves tonight on a transcontinental tour that will keep him traveling almost continually until he arrives June 21 at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia, where he will seek the Republican nomination for President.

The Governor, accompanied by his wife and daughter, Dorothy, will go first to New York.

Alexandria, Fairfax Towns Voting Today

Alexandria will elect four city councilmen and towns in Fairfax County will name mayors and new council members today in Virginia municipal elections.

Polls will be open from 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., Daylight Saving Time.

Alexandria will elect its first councilmen under an at-large plan adopted last March. Leroy S. Benheim, Marshall J. Beverley, Roy C Bragg and Albert A. Smoot, nominated in an April 5 Democratic primary, have no opposition from Republicans or independents.

The four new councilmen will serve, under the at-large plan, one year, and then all seven council seats will be filled for three-year terms.

Voting will be conducted in regular ward voting places, James N. Colasanto, secretary of the electoral board, said. He added that new voting precincts created last month for the Second and Sixth Wards will not be used until after today's election.

In Vienna, Fairfax County, 10 candidates are seeking five seats in the town council. John J. Nichols and Joseph Davies are candidates for mayor.

In the town of Fairfax, only six declared candidates are seeking six council seats and there is no candidate for mayor. Robert D. Graham is stepping down as mayor after six years. The election, therefore, is left to write-in votes for mayor.

House of Lords Cheers Ending of Jury of Peers Law

London, June 7 (U.P.).—The House of Lords tonight cheered the passage of a law ending an ancient privilege of peers in England. From now on nobility will have trial just like anybody else.

The ancient privilege permitted no commoner to sit on a jury trying a noble. He had to be tried by a "jury of his peers."

"If that method is good enough for other people, it is good enough for us," Lord Chancellor Viscount Jowitt said of the new law.

"If it is not good enough for them, let us improve it and get it better. Let us end what has become entirely inappropriate today, when we have 850 peers."

IT'S HERE!
The first installment of that thrilling serial "FROM $20 A DAY TO $2,000,000 A YEAR."
Chapter One—"In the Beginning"
Prohibition passed away, amid moderate quiet, on December 5, 1933. Before sundown we joined the hundreds seeking to open liquor stores in the Nation's Capital. We had everything they had . . . except the license fee, $750 coin of the realm—That we didn't have.
It took seven months to find an "angel" in a position (and of a mind) to risk that $750. Perhaps because our only collateral was our brilliant future.
In retrospect it seems possible that our nuisance value, rather than the bright prospects we painted, got us the loan. Persistence paid off.
So, in June, 1934, Plain Old Pearson's Liquor Annex was born in the tiny, dusty corner of a drug store. And if you had walked in with $65 you could have bought every bottle on hand. Cynics would have described our working capital as limited.
Even then Plain Old Pearson's was unique. We were the world's champion movers. Every time we got our corner spick and span, our wares neatly arranged, that corner was coveted for some drug or cosmetic. So we'd pack our baby and move to the next darkest corner. Around and around the store.
We got to be mighty good cleaners and painters, as well as movers.
But all eight of our customers said they liked to do business with us. That's nothing compared to how we felt about them.
Washington was most unkind to business babies in those days. The Government paid off the 1st and 15th. Between times our customers got more and more insolvent.
A few days before pay-day we'd get an avalanche of empty beer and pop bottles, returned for credit on full bottles. We were the original bottle baby.
We couldn't spend bottles, so we began pulling the same trick on beer distributors. For two weeks out of the month we bought and sold an awful lot of beer without once touching the cash register!
We first hit the big time one morning when a customer phoned, wanted to pick up a case of so-and-so at 3:00—Boy, a whole CASE! A distributor was persuaded to deliver the case at 2:45. The driver waited around the corner until we collected our money. Then we paid him. Solemnly, we all shook hands. Baby was starting to crawl.

Montanans Also Irked at Truman

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
WILLIAM RITCHIE.

Omaha, June 7 (AP).—An anti-Truman flareup in Nebraska, touched off Sunday by dissatisfaction with handling of the President's Omaha visit, has spread to Montana, William Ritchie, Nebraska Democratic State chairman, said today.

Ritchie, one of the 12 Nebraska delegates to the National Convention, released a copy of a telegram he said he received from Lester H. Loble of Helena, chairman of the Montana Democratic State Central Committee, saying Montana party leaders also were dissatisfied with the treatment they are getting on the occasion of President Truman's visit.

(At Helena, Mont., Loble said the State's party leaders are "hot under the collar" over the Truman train arrangements, but the State's delegates are instructed to vote for Truman.)

Ritchie, claiming Nebraska and Iowa party leaders got the "bum's rush" during Mr. Truman's visit, had announced withdrawal of his support from Mr. Truman. He supplemented the announcement with a statement today that he will not be a candidate for reelection as chairman if Mr. Truman is nominated at the Philadelphia convention.

Lobel's telegram said: "Treatment accorded your committee and Iowa and Nebrasaka Democrats on occasion of President Truman's visit is same as we are receiving. We are given no part in arrangements and have been advised that none of us will be permitted on President's train. The late President Roosevelt, and other Presidents always wanted us to ride through the State on the presidential train.

Truman 'Sure' Of Nomination

already his. He is certain of it. Talk about a "stampede" to General Dwight D. Eisenhower or another at the July convention bothers him not at all.

Mr. Truman has not made up his mind about a democratic vice presidential nominee.

At least, that is what his intimates think. If he has decided on a running mate, they say, he certainly has not confided in them.

The Chief Executive likes and admires Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas but contrary to reports he has never asked Douglas to go on the 1948 ticket with him. It is true that the two conferred at the White House recently, however. This conference came about at Douglas' request.

The Washington Post reporter has learned on good authority that Douglas called to tell Mr. Truman that he was happy in his Supreme Court post and had no desire to leave it. Purpose of this call in short was to dissociate himself from the Douglas "boom" started by his admirers.

Mr. Truman mixed politics with relaxation this evening when he held a levee for most of the Idaho delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Afterward Dan Cavanagh, Democratic State chairman, said Idaho's 12 convention votes would be 100 per cent for the President at Philadelphia.

Tomorrow night, in Butte, Mr. Truman will see 50 political and civic leaders of Montana.

All of which means another nail in the earlier White House contention that this is to be a "non-political" trip.

One other political fact was clear as Mr. Truman halted his barnstorming trip here in Sun Valley this afternoon: he intends to wage one of the most intensive campaigns in American political history, and this is just the warmup for it.

Mr. Truman stayed up far beyond his usual bedtime last night to make a rear-platform talk to a crowd at Rawlins, Wyo. He said that maybe "before this brawl is over next November I can come back here and discuss the issues of the day with you."

Although it was close to midnight when he turned in, he was up at 5:45 o'clock this morning. At 7:50 o'clock he was making an off-the-cuff talk to a crowd of 500 at Pocatello, Idaho, home town of Senator Glen (Cowboy) Taylor, Henry Wallace's prospective running mate on a third-party ticket.

Mr. Truman, winding up his talk, made a statement that had the whole entourage puzzled.

"I am coming out here," he said, "so that you can look at me and hear what I say, and then make up your mind as to whether you believe some of the things that have been said about your President.

"I have been in politics a long time, and it makes no difference what they say about you, if it isn't so. If they can prove it on you, you are in a bad fix indeed. They never have been able to prove it on me."

Prove what? Was he talking about things that have been said about him in connection with his association with the Pendergast machine in Kansas City? Or was he referring to the blasts of the Republicans and Henry Wallace and Cowboy Taylor?

There was no explanation from Mr. Truman himself or his associates.

The Idaho Statesman, published in Boise, carried an editorial this morning that had this to say about Mr. Truman:

"Though we differ strongly with many of President Truman's ideas as to what is good for the Nation, we admire a scrapper, and we welcome him to our corner of the United States with the assurance that, win or lose next November, we respect him for the fight he is putting up to hold his job."

Mr. Truman obliged the editor by taking another crack at the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress for cutting down on appropriations for reclamation and power projects—projects that mean much to the voters out this way.

After telling the crowd at Pocatello about his own efforts in this field, he said:

"But we have some people in these United States who follow the lead of Daniel Webster, who didn't think the West was any good, who didn't think we should do anything with it.

"We also have some people in the United States who would like to restore the Insull era, when they put the welfare of the few promoters above the welfare of the people."

The Idaho landscape in the Rocky Mountain foothills was glorious this morning, and Mr. Truman showed in his talk that he had been gazing at it from his private car, the Ferdinand Magellan.

"Coming up the valley," he said, "I saw a mare mothering a mule colt. Looked just like Missouri. And I saw sheep on one side and a herd of cattle on the other. And I can remember the day when they couldn't get that close together.

"You see, my grandfather on one side was strong for cattle and the grandfather on the other side was strong on sheep. And they didn't get along very well. But through my mother and father, and diplomacy of the third generation, we see that they can live together very creditably. And that is a good thing, I think."

Auto Bomb Death Is Ruled Murder in Arlington

its moorings and blew out every car window.

The blast apparently went through to the cement paving, then upward, denting the roof of the car into a peak.

An aerial map and a Piper Cub logbook, which apparently had been in the glove compartment of the car, were blown free, the map lodging in the mangle of springs where the driver's seat had been and the log book blown clear of the car.

A trail of blood led from the car to the sidewalk, where Denekas had been taken to an ambulance.

The floor lamp he carried was pushed into the back seat.

Mrs. LeRoy Bove, 5840 N. 21st st., whose bedroom is about 100 feet from where the car was parked, said she was wakened about 4:15 a. m. by what she thought were two light explosions.

"I thought it was our water heater in the basement," she said. "But my husband thought it more like somebody slamming down the front hood on an automobile."

Mrs. Bove said the streetlight near the scene was out last night and said she believed it may have been put out the night before.

Mrs. Helen Denekas, the dead man's estranged wife, first learned of his death when she called the N. 21st address at about noon. She hurried to the scene with her brother, Newton B. Staples, of 1022 N. Fillmore st. Police questioned her for about 20 minutes.

Mrs. Denekas, who now lives at 1415 S. Glebe rd., works at the Dardenelles Restaurant in Falls Church. The couple had two childen, William A, 9, and Robert N., 7, who now live with Mrs. Denekas' mother, Mrs. N. A. Staples of the Fillmore st. address. The children have not yet been notified of the tragedy.

Married in 1938, the couple had separated about six months ago, Mrs. Denekas said.

Appeared in Good Spirits

Staples told reporters he had seen Denekas Sunday night at about 9:30. Denekas was driving throug! Clarendon and stopped to chat with him. The dead man had told him he had been to races in Winchester and was going home immediately. Staples said Denekas appeared in good spirits.

Also called to the scene by police was Frank Strader, jr., 3611 N. Utah st., a Fourth Precinct private who has been on the Washington force for eight years.

Strader, who owns the N. 21st st. home jointly with his wife, said they had been separated since last August. He said that he knew Denekas only slightly, and could give no reason for his death. A policeman for eight years, Strader, 37, worked the midnight to 8 a. m. shift yesterday.

Mrs. Lorena Strader, who was living in the home with her two children, Bruce, 15, and Gail, 11, was working as a waitress in the Clarendon Restaurant when the explosion came. Both children were home. Gail said she was getting up at about 10:40 when she saw Denekas, wearing pants and undershirt, go downstairs to answer the telephone.

Gail said she heard him say, "Yes, I'm looking for him," and hang up the phone. Within 10 to 20 minutes, she said, Denekas was dressed, ran downstairs carrying a gold-colored floor lamp and went out the front door. The girl said the next thing she heard was a "great big explosion." She went downstairs and saw the ruined car.

But while the manner of Denekas' death was reminiscent of "gang" action, Police Chief Woodyard, who hurried back from Richmond when notified of the explosion, declared, "At the present time I would say it definitely is not a gang murder."

Denekas had moved into the N. 21st st. home about last October, with his business partner, B. L. McDaniel.

The two men were co-owners of the Old Dominion Neon Sign Co. at 3434 N. Washingtonu blvd. McDaniel had moved out "two or three months ago," they said.

Police yesterday removed material believed to be office records of the firm when they went to the 21st st. residence yesterday. No comment was forthcoming on what they planned to do with the records however.

Earl T. Mason, 4518 Wilson blvd., one of the owners of the building in which Denekas and McDaniel had their business, said yesterday the two had moved in and set up shop in the spring of 1946.

Early in April of this year, he said, they "broke up." Mason said the two men had been bickering for some time, and that at the time they broke up their business, they owed two months' rent.

Company Was Robbed

According to court records, both McDaniel and Denekas had been given 90-day suspended sentences last spring in Arlington County Court for passing a check for insufficient funds.

Mason said both men had signed checks for the organization. The check involved in the court case was for $37.51 and was passed at the Arlington Bootery.

FRAN STRADER, JR.
Blast Near His Home

On March 12, the Arlington County sheriff had attached the business property of the firm for debts. Shortly after that, police records show, the company was broken into by persons unknown, who took about $600 worth of equipment.

Mason said McDaniel had been in town last week, but "the boys didn't get together." McDaniel is believed to be living in the Winchester area at the present time.

Born in Washington

Denekas, born in Washington November 26, 1917, had been living in Arlington for about 10 years at the time of his death. He had served for about four years as a member of the auxiliary police of Arlington County during World War II.

In 1944 Denekas had applied for a hacker's license in Arlington County. He formerly had been employed by the Postoffice Department. He was an electrician by trade, and police said he had been doing "odd jobs" when the neon sign business he operated with McDaniel had been unprofitable.

McDaniel and Denekas jointly owned a Piper Cub airplane. Denekas, who had been issued a student pilot's license in June of last year, had been taking flying lessons at Beacon Feld near Alexandria. According to Mason, one of the owners of the building in which the two men had their store, McDaniel had flown the Piper Cub to Richmond sometime ago and had "cracked-up" the plane.

Funeral arrangements for Denekas have not yet been completed. In addition to his wife and two children, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Magdalen Angerman of Takoma Park; a stepbrother, Leonard Angerman of Washington State; a stepfather, Lee Angerman of Florida, and an uncle, Percy May, 3812 N. Washington blvd.

5 Gypsies Indicted in Theft

Five gypsies were indicted yesterday in the theft of almost $1000 in money and jewels from Lena Demetro, so-called "Queen of the Gypsies" here.

The true bills were among 30 returned by the District grand jury, were prepared by Assistant United States Attorney Sylvan Schwartz.

Four of the gypsies were charged with robbery. They are Eli Miller, 57, his wife Anna, 55, and their two sons, Dewey, 28, and George, 26, all of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Demetro, who police say is a palmist, charged that the four, related to her by marriage, subdued her and her son Robert at gunpoint on April 28 in their home at 1216 New York ave. nw.

She said they tied her to a bed and ransacked a foot locker to obtain money and jewels valued at $500.

Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, 21, Mrs. Demetro's daughter-in-law, was charged with grand larceny in absconding with $492 in money and jewels on March 27, on the pretense that she was going to Philadelphia to see her husband.

Expansion Vital, Pepco Tells PUC

Rising costs of operation and immediate need for an 86-million-dollar expansion program were cited by Potomac Electric Power Co. officials yesterday to support their plea for a rate increase.

The proposed increase, which would become effective July 1 if granted by the District Public Utilities Commission, would add 10 cents a week to the average home electric bill.

At the all-day hearing before the PUC, the first witness was W. J. Lank, the company's chief electrical engineer, who declared the firm would have to "spend two to three times as much in the next five years for new construction as in any previous similar period."

The need for such a record program arose from these factors, he declared:

1. Population expansion.

2. Backlog construction such as street lighting and commercial building renovation and erection, deferred by the war.

3. Present availability of electrical appliances not obtainable during the war.

4. Increase in electrical facilities used in research projects such as wind tunnels, testing basins, stimulated by war experience.

5. Resumption of a Government building program covering hospitals, office buildings, courts and others.

6. Today's "very high level of construction costs as compared with prewar or war period."

62,535 More Units By 1951

7. Backlog of the company's construction program.

Lank, who has been with Pepco 22 years, said 62,535 housing units including 38,465 apartments, are expected to be completed and require electrical service between now and the end of 1950.

He explained that the firm's commercial representatives "are in daily contact with builders" and their information indicated the following housing erections:

1. About 8300 units are planned for Anacostia and 2500 in the Cheverly area, or about half the new housing in the District.

2. About 6600 units are planned in the Bethesda, Kenwood, Glen Echo and Potomac sections, mostly within 10 miles of the District line.

3. About 23,000 are scheduled for Silver Spring, Kensington, Wheaton and Colesville.

3400 In Riverdale

4. About 3400 in the Riverdale Queens Chapel areas.

5. About 7500 in the Maryland area southeast of Anacostia.

The second witness, Charles L. Carr, assistant comptroller, said the firm was faced with the problem of not only attaining the authorized 5½ per cent return from its facilities, but also of raising additional capital to cover the necessary expansion.

Carr said attracting new capital was especially difficult in the light of "critically low earnings during the year 1947," which fell about $480,000 below the allowable basic return established by the PUC.

The hearings will resume today at 10 a.m. in the District Building. Both the Treasury Department and the Fairmac Corp., owners of the giant Fairlington and McLean Gardens developments, have asked to testify.

Expansion Planned

43 Million Asked for State Offices

A proposal for a $43,150,000 expansion of State Department office facilities here was sent to Congress yesterday.

The plan, presented by Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming, calls for remodeling and expanding the Federal building at 21st st. and Virginia ave. nw., to give the State Department a million square feet of space in addition to the 270,000 it now has in the building. The whole department would be centered there.

General Fleming also asked Congress to approve a new $7,400,000 office building at Suitland, Md., to provide half a million square feet of office space for processing the next census in 1950.

Both projects would be authorized by a bill, sent by General Fleming to House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) and referred to the House Public Works Committee. One feature of the bill would let the cost figures vary with the general level of construction costs.

104 Traffic Violators Escape

A woman who parked her auto in a restricted zone while assisting her partially blind uncle into a bank was among traffic violators who escaped with warnings last week, police reported yesterday.

In the weekly report on traffic ticket adjustments, the Metropolitan Police Department disclosed 104 violators were given warnings, while 12 tickets were canceled. Nine of the cancellations were for diplomatic immunity.

Mrs. Mary E. Tutt, 3620 15th st., ne., charged with parking in a restricted zone on 15th st. near New York ave. nw., was released by Capt. Loraine T. Johnson of the Traffic Division with a warning after she told him she had left the auto to assist her 75-year-old uncle into a bank to cash his veteran's pension check.

On previous trips to the bank, Mrs. Tutt said, she has made a practice of circling the block while her uncle cashed his check, but accompanied him last week because he complained he was not well and his eyesight was not as good as usual.

Another warning was issued to Mrs. Dorothy B. Pitzer, 1301 Floral st. nw. She received a ticket for parking too far from the curb.

Benefiting by cancellations as a result of diplomatic immunity, the report said, were M. H. E.MacRae of the Neetherlands Legation, charged with parking in a restricted zone; Caesar Endara, Newport, R. I., parking too close to an intersection; Armando O. Ramirez, 5045 Reno rd. nw., parking in an alley; Adnan Pachachi, 3133 Connecticut ave. nw., parking in a restricted zone; Paul F. Blanc, 4353 Windom pl. nw., parking overtime; Rens B. Blum, 1326 Harvard st. nw., parking in a restricted zone; Carlos G. MacKenny, 2128 Bancroft pl. nw.; parking in a restricted zone Andrew Fitzharris of the British Embassy, parking in a restricted zone, and Jacqueline Brindamour, 1325 Shepherd st. nw., parking too close to an intersection.

The Baltimore Plan

Acting under the auspices of the Washington Housing Association, a number of civic groups have agreed to study the so-called Baltimore Plan with the object of applying it to District slum areas so far as that may prove practicable. This is a mature and sensible attitude which eschews alike the extravagant laudation of the plan by the National Association of Home Builders and the hostility which has been voiced by some advocates of public housing. The discussion of the plan by the Housing Association last week indicates that it can bring about great improvement of slum housing, clean up insanitary conditions and minimize the slum menace to health and character. At the same time it is obviously no substitute for rigorous slum reclamation and the construction of public housing for low-income families.

The Baltimore Plan is really a campaign for bringing slum housing into compliance with minimum health and safety requirements. Its achievements are especially notable because entire blocks rather than individual houses are treated. Some old shacks not worth repairing have been torn down, but for the most part old structures have been cleaned up, repaired and, in some respects, modernized. Dilapidated old fences have been removed, tons of junk have been hauled away, outdoor toilets have been replaced, and rat infestations have been cleaned out. These are improvements that ought to be made in every slum area by strict enforcement of modern housing and sanitary regulations.

In applying the plan to Washington various precautions will have to be taken. For example, Washington has many more decrepit frame hovels than Baltimore has, and, for these, demolition is the only sensible remedy. If houses of this sort predominate in a block, moreover, the desirability of complete redevelopment is obvious. Costly renovation of some buildings in such squares might be a waste of money. Another major concern is the overcrowding of Washington slums. There is not much point in driving "doubled-up" families out of one slum area into another; yet that is precisely what happens when the law against overcrowding is enforced in a city that does not have sufficient low-cost housing to accommodate its people. To make the clean-up and renovation campaign really effective, it should be accompanied by a sizable public housing program.

The first step to take is the adoption of a housing code. A model housing code for the District was worked out by a group of experts more than 10 years ago. Baltimore borrowed parts of it as the basis for its slum rehabilitation campaign. But the District Commissioners never put it into effect here. For enforcement of the code Baltimore also found it necessary to set up a special housing court and a new sanitation division in the police department. Washington would certainly have to enlarge Col. William H. Cary's public health engineering force if the job were to be done properly here.

Intelligent operation of the plan would also seem to hinge upon the adoption of a city-wide redevelopment scheme carefully worked out by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, as contemplated under the District Land Redevelopment Act. The worst slum squares could thus be marked for early clearance and replanning, and clean-up and renovation efforts would be concentrated in blighted areas where the houses are worth saving. Washington's need for both programs is nothing short of desperate.

Interpreting The Truce

With the news that Count Bernadotte's mediation efforts are stalled on the issue of immigration into Israel, time out might be taken to examine again the latest turn in British policy. The latest cease-fire resolution originated with the British representative, Sir Alexander Cadogan. It called for a pledge not to introduce a fighting personnel or men of military age into Palestine during the cease-fire. Israel objected. Whereupon several amendments were offered, the most pertinent being that of the French representative, Mr. Parodi. This called for keeping out fighting personnel but not men of military age. These latter, the amendment went on, were to get no military training during the time of the truce, and were to be immobilized by internment. Senator Austin incorporated the amendment into the cease-fire resolution in these words: "calls upon all governments and authorities concerned, should men of military age be introduced into countries or territories under their control, to undertake not to mobilize or submit them to military training." This was accepted by Sir Alexander, and a redefinition of the amended paragraph was further made to underline the meaning of the French amendment. The British voted for it.

Yet the British at a later session backtracked. Sir Alexander said that there was doubt whether the amendment did mean that men of military age could be admitted into Palestine. The doubt was then resolved into a unilateral act by the British government that men of military age were barred. Acting on this interpretation of the French amendment (which Mr. Parodi could not possibly accept), the British authorities then said that they would prevent Jews of military age from leaving Cyprus. Who acted first—the British in London or the British authorities in the Middle East? It looks as though our feeling of a while ago is justified—that the men on the spot are running the British show in the Middle East, regardless of what happens at Lake Success. That makes Count Bernadotte's job, difficult enough in view of the Security Council's pusillanimity in dumping into his lap the interpretation of the cease-fire, the more difficult.

The Chestnut Grove

It is interesting to read that the former Secretary of State, Mr. Byrnes, when he made an address the other day to the combined graduating classes of several high schools in his native South Carolina, had nothing to say about the troubled international scene, or the menace of Soviet aggression or the possible implication of the disorders in Palestine. He did not warn the boys and girls that their courage and spiritual resources will be tested when they presently find themselves, as it were, on a darkling plain full of confused alarms of struggle and flight. Instead, he plunged into a spirited and manly defense of the purity of Southern grammar.

"I have never known," said Mr. Byrnes, "any person in South Carolina, educated or uneducated, white or colored, to use the phrase 'you all' except in the plural. Used in the plural it is good English," and Mr. Byrnes went on to prove it by various quotations from Shakespeare and the English Bible. It is a point on which our Southern friends seem to be even more sensitive than they are about such matters as the poll tax, the grandfather clause, the bruising of mint in the preparation of juleps or the use of sweetening in spoon bread.

Without professing any particular authority in the premises, we are inclined to agree that the insinuation that any Southerner ever says, or ever has said "you all" to designate an individual person is just another piece of malicious and mendacious Yankee propaganda. As far as we can make out, "you all" was fairly common usage in sixteenth century England, when the pronoun "you" was superseding both the nominative "thou" and the accusative "thee" in the second person singular.

In Shakespeare "thou" and "you" and "thee" and "you" in the singular, and "ye" and "you" in the nominative plural, are used almost indiscriminately. Sometimes, however, he seems to observe a distinction. Thus Hamlet in his capacity of Prince of Denmark, welcoming Horatio to the court at Elsinore, says courteously:

> We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

But in his dying appeal for Horatio's friendship, Hamlet says:

> If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart
> Absent thee from felicity awhile . . .

It seems reasonable to suppose that the use of "you all" had its origin in a necessity that occasionally arose to distinguish between singular and plural in certain situations, and in the necessity of some collective pronoun in the second person nominative plural to replace the archaic and vanishing "ye." Having thus settled this momentous question to our own, and we hope to Mr. Byrnes', satisfaction, we promise to proceed, at the first suitable opportunity, to the problem of the blondes and brunettes.

Age In The Senate

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas has shown good judgment in deciding to retire at the end of his present term after thirty years in the United States Senate. His decision would have brought much more applause, however, if it had been made voluntarily before formidable opposition to his previous decision to run again had developed. Next month Mr. Capper will be 83. At the end of the term for which he originally planned to run he would have been on the eve of 90. No man at such advanced age can hope to do the strenuous work of a United States Senator, and Mr. Capper's willingness to attempt it cost him the support of many friends and admirers. He has paid a price for his initial failure to see that age has deprived him of availability.

In his prime Senator Capper was a progressive legislator of much influence. His constructive work has undoubtedly been blurred in recent years, however, by his lack of vigor and inability to keep abreast of the times. It is no kindness to a man beyond the eightieth milestone to permit him to hold a responsibility such as the chairmanship of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Because of the frequent failure of aged legislators to recognize their own limitations, the Senate and House ought to guard themselves against placement of committee chairmanships in aged hands.

What Taber Did For Zhdanov

There is one man in the Kremlin who must have heaved a sigh of relief when he heard about the blind and savage cut in the ECA appropriation. That is Zhdanov, member of the Politburo, and, in some eyes, Stalin's heir apparent. He was the genius back of the revival of the Comintern in October, 1947. On October 22 Pravda reprinted his report to the new organization, which was called Cominform, shorthand for Communist Information Bureau. He said, "As for the U. S. S. R., it will make all efforts to see to it that this [the Marshall] plan is not realized."

The Cominform then started an incessant drumfire on the people of the Western countries to frighten them into withdrawing from an "enslaving" alliance with "untrustworthy" and "imperialistic" America. Intimidation kept pace with propaganda. Czechoslovakia and Finland already had been bludgeoned into nonparticipation, and Moscow, knowing how they felt about it, then sought to stifle resentment by absorbing the Czech government and making a military pact with Finland. The Communists in Italy threatened rebellion all through the precarious days of an election in which Moscow made the issue Marshall vs. Molotov. Elsewhere the pressure held a menace which made other countries fearful of reprisals. Even the bigger countries wondered when Moscow started to shake the uneasy position of all Europe by warlike moves in Berlin. Yet sixteen defiant countries, in spite of everything, held together and set up Marshall Europe—staking their future on faith that the United States would see the Marshall Plan to fruition.

Their faith was vindicated when the plan, after the most scrupulous screening that any legislation can have had, became law. It was then that Moscow, with its sense of realism, began to prepare the way to accommodation. The oldest of political mottoes is "If you can't lick 'em, jine 'em." An olive branch came out of Moscow which, though full of thorns and pretty shopworn, seemed to suggest a sort of truce in its bitter war on the Marshall Plan. The Zhdanov fizzle had to be liquidated, and Zhdanov himself must have been feeling nervous, for Moscow now had words to eat and pledges to redeem. The Finns got from Moscow a cut in reparations; it was the payoff for Moscow's failure to stop the Marshall Plan. Finland had been told "You can't trust Marshall, but you can trust Molotov," and the Finns have collected on Zhdanov's mistake. Something will yet have to be done for Czechoslovakia.

All this was going on when the Taber group suddenly decided to kick the heart out of the Marshall Plan. The news was scarcely out when the Muscovites, unable to conceal their glee, began to dust off their anti-Marshall Plan propaganda. All they had to do was to remind a chagrined Europe that their warnings had come true. Mr. Taber has justified Zhdanov's propaganda at the very moment that the Muscovites were actually confessing the failure of it.

It is said in defense of the 25 per cent cut that conditions have changed in Europe. Only one figure has changed. And that is the estimate of crops in Europe, and the estimate is exactly 1 per cent above the last December's estimates on which the plan was based. Does that justify a slash of 25 per cent? Moreover, Mr. Taber talks as if this were only a relief project. Leaving out aid to China, which is relief, the whole purpose of the ERP is reconstruction, not relief. It is an investment program in recovery the aim of which is to put Europe as an entity on its feet before it collapses on its knees before Russia. It is impossible, as Mr. Taber says, to figure out exactly how much it will cost. It is impossible, indeed, to say whether it will be successful. But Senator Vandenberg was right when he said that it is not what we can afford to do but what we cannot afford not to do that counts. The stakes are so great that the counsel of prudence, as Representative Herter put it, is to be inexact on the safe side, given efficient administration.

The ERP proposition is something like an atomic pile. As our scientists discovered, that pile—the amount of uranium put in one place—has to be of a sufficient size or else it will not operate; there would be no reaction at all. Too many of the neutron bullets which are supposed to smash into other nuclei and thus create still other atomic projectiles would escape into space outside of the system unless the whole agglomeration is built up to a point known as the critical size. So also there is a critical size to our foreign aid, and the Paris Conference Report, the Harriman Report and the Administration all arrived at figures not too far apart in their appraisal of what it would take to make the operation truly chain-reacting—capable, that is to say, both of sustaining itself in a process of economic rehabilitation and of getting Europe off our backs.

These considerations, we believe, make sense to the American people. If the Marshall Plan had not been acceptable to the American people, Congress would not have authorized it by overwhelming majority. They did not say, "OK, if Mr. Taber agrees." They do not recognize any veto power in the hands of a single Congressman or a group when Congress already has spoken. Certainly they have more intelligence than to advertise to the world that Zhdanov was right when he impugned both the good name and the trustworthiness of the American Government, as he did, for instance, in the notes to the European governments warning them not to go to the Paris Conference which created Marshall Europe.

"You All"

In many ways the Hon. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina is a very attractive person. He is never more so than when coming to the defense of the pride and joy of the Southern people — their native speech.

The phrase, "you all," which is so often caricatured on the radio, in some movies and in the theater, and which Mr. Byrnes used for a text for his address to the high school students of Aiken, S. C., is as good English as is to be found in Shakespeare, or Marlowe or Francis Bacon. As a matter of fact, it is a contemporary of the writings of those masters of English speech.

The chief glory of the Southern people, I have heard, is that they are Christians; and ergo Bible readers. Henry Mencken could find no more bitter sneer to utter against them than to call their country "the Bible Belt." It is from Holy Writ that these much-abused people get their "you all," and from the greatest man that ever lived—St. Paul.

Writing to the church at Philippi from prison, he told "all the saints in Christ Jesus" that:

"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you,

"Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,

"For all your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;

"Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ:

"Even as it is meet for me to think of you all, because I have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel, you all are partakers of my grace."

If any better authority for the use of this fine phrase is needed, I know not where to find it.

Palestine Federation

Mr. Irving Wilner attempted in his letter of May 29 to suggest to an enlightened public why, and how, "a federation" could be formed, as between the state of Israel and the Trans-Jordan Arabs, with King Abdullah as the titular head, and with bilateral agreements the combination of which would culminate somehow and be eventually "incorporated within the framework of the Brtiish commonwealth of Nations."

Britain has just outmaneuvered herself after conniving for 25 years or more to accomplish almost exactly what he proposes. To prove to what embarrassment such a negative policy has led Britain, she has been pleading with the members of the United Nations Security Council that she was unable to check the momentum of the Arab Legions against the defenseless Jews in Jerusalem.

Britain at the same time was arrogantly proclaiming to the world that she alone had trained, officered, financed and (if you add these up) was responsible for this undeclared war against the state of Israel.

These seemingly significant events are still beclouding the real honest-to-goodness problem, which is no longer a Zionist problem, nor an anti-Semitic problem and certainly not an Arab League problem. Discounting all of the religious, nationalistic, economic, and social differences involved, there remains the fact that hundreds of thousands of Jews are still in DP camps in Europe. There are still many thousands of Jews on Cyprus, who, but for the individual and collective contributions for this specific purpose, would have starved long ago.

How could Mr. Wilner possibly presume that the state of Israel would ever accede to a proposal that would make of her one of the British dominions, when Britain admittedly made such a dismal failure with her mandate powers over the control of Palestine? Britain has left Palestine through the front door, in disgrace, and re-entered Palestine through the back door with a vengeful spirit in the form of bombs, tanks and guns.

How also can he conceive of such dominion status jointly with Trans-Jordan Arabs when the very land upon which these Arabs are now living was originally a portion of the area allotted to the Jews of Palestine under that mandate which Britain has so shamefully disvowed.

Training and Casualties

The Washington Post of May 30 carried a propagandistic story by Marshall Andrews about the four chaplains who gave their lives on a sinking ship because four soldiers did not have lifebelts.

The writer claims that this type of loss has happened because mothers "were unwilling to spare" their sons "for a few months of rudimentary training in peacetime."

The writer neglects to say that these men were sent overseas in 1944, after the draft had been in effect for more than three years. These men had had more military training then is proposed by the Army for UMT.

If The Washington Post editorily wants to espouse compulsory training, that is its privilege. But it ought not to sanction the twisting of facts in an emotional manner to support its case.

The statement that "America has fought all of its wars with untrained or half-trained soldiers," is not true. During this past war there were more than 8 million men in the Army, yet only a million and a half were used as combat troops. Compulsory training had begun as early as 1941.

When the United States actually began to fight on European and African soil, therefore, millions of men must have had more training than is contemplated under the current proposal for universal training. It could not have been lack of training that produced casualities under these conditions, unless the Army leadership deliberately or carelessly sent untrained men into battle instead of using their trained troops.

DP's at Home

The June 2 letter of Rafael A. Nieves, with respect to "displaced persons" on the home front, is a challenge to all thinking people. Until we have had the moral stamina to try to help families from being evicted from their homes, in order to make way for more offices (it is said that there already is an oversupply of office space), or for some other reason, and until we have recognized the right of every individual, regardless of age, to earn a living, dissension, hatred and bitterness will abound.

Until we have analyzed the many causes that foment war, and have made an effort to overcome them by fixing our eyes on the domestic scene, our prayers for peace will avail nothing. Faith without work is dead. Unfortunately, the perspective of certain people registers only at a distance of several thousand miles.

Texan Independence

In his letter of June 2, Mr. W. B. Phillips states, "It doesn't really worry us that we stole Texas from Mexico . . ."

Sub, let me remind the gentleman that the people of Texas fought and won their independence from Mexico in 1836. On March 6, 1836, inside the stone walls of the Alamo, 187 defenders gave their lives in defense of Texas liberty. The "we" of whom Mr. Phillips speaks had nothing to do with that engagement. Texas Independence Day is March 2 and is a State holiday. The Republic of Texas was admitted to the Union December 29, 1845.

Mundt Bill Hearings

May we express agreement with the thesis conveyed by your editorial of June 2, "Helping the Commies," that more legal advice from experts in constitutional law is desirable for a fair evaluation of the constitutionality of the Mundt-Nixon bill. The distinguished attorneys to whom you refer would undoubtedly have been helpful.

We note, however, that in saying the committee "heard only a couple of members of the local bar," you have overlooked the testimony of Thomas I. Emerson, formerly general counsel of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and now professor of law at Yale University law school, who appeared for the National Lawyers Guild; Osmond K. Fraenkel, one of the Nation's distinguished constitutional lawyers and defenders of civil liberties, who appeared for the American Civil Liberties Union, and O. John Rogge, formerly the Department of Justice's special prosecutor in the sedition cases and chief of the Criminal Division, concededly an expert on the subject matter, who appeared on his own behalf.

The testimony of these eminent lawyers, all of whom opposed the bill and none of whom is a local attorney, merited the most serious study and consideration and, indeed, deserved more notice than was accorded by the news columns of your paper.

"Arlington Candidates"

I wish to point out a certain inconsistency and an incorrect allegation contained in your June 4 editorial, "Arlington Candidates." You say it is regrettable that the Civil Service Commission has found it necessary under the Hatch Act to prohibit Federal employes from participating as partisan candidates in local elections. Further on you state, "We have never understood why it is necessary for campaigns for municipal offices to be conducted on a partisan basis." Why, then, do you regret a decision which supports the efficacy of the nonpartisan elections which you favor?

What is regrettable, as you so well state, is the decision of the local political parties to run candidates despite the overwhelming sentiment of the people in favor of nonpartisan elections for local office as expressed over the past two years and demonstrated in two county board elections.

Regarding the incorrectness of your implied allegation that the Better Government League is another party, let me explain: The Better Government League does not sponsor candidates. By a majority vote of the membership the league indorses nonpartisan candidates for local office regardless of their party affiliation (if any) on State and national levels, and does so only after candidates, having appeared before the group and declared their platforms, are found to be in accord with the BGL principles, which principles are designed to effect the public good.

Washington Calling

Thwarted Hoffman

"WHAT WE need is more businessmen in government." "Only a man who has met a payroll can run a big undertaking." "Let's use the brains that industry uses to achieve big things."

How many times in recent years have we heard that kind of talk. It is invariably the cry when government is faced with a big task.

So what happens? The European Recovery Program is one of the biggest jobs ever contemplated—spending billions of dollars in order to bring about the rehabilitation of western Europe. President Truman names as boss of this job Paul G. Hoffman, one of the ablest men in American industry.

If you were to point out to a foreigner the best type of American industrialist, you would probably pick Hoffman. He is the kind of dynamic individual who gets things accomplished.

There is nothing solemn or pompous about him. There is a humorous glint in his eye as he sails in to do what has to be done. The man who built the Studebaker Corp. into a thriving business has many of the qualities that Sinclair Lewis gave to the hero of his novel, Dodsworth.

So Paul Hoffman comes to Washington. And he promptly finds that the rules under which he must try to work are utterly and completely different from anything that any industrialist ever faced.

HOFFMAN is much too sensible to complain. Or if he does mutter, he keeps his complaint for his wife and his closest friends. But the point involved here is so important that it seems to me Hoffman's position should be explored objectively. A man playing under a set of rules that give him broad authority to exercise his judgment and talents suddenly finds himself in a new kind of game with a dozen jealous guardians breathing down his neck.

As the head of a big corporation, Hoffman has been responsible to his board of directors. The test of his ability, and therefore the test of whether or not he kept his job, was his capacity to produce good motor cars that could be sold at a profit. Achieving that, he also achieved a considerable measure of independence.

His board of directors in the new job is Congress. When the President appointed him and the Senate approved, he accepted in the belief that the board of directors had made up its mind on the task in hand.

Hoffman very quickly discovered, however, that this was not so. He spent a lot of time debating the terms of the job with a crotchety member of the board of directors named John Taber.

Appearing before the Taber faction of the board, Hoffman has had to state in advance what he intended to do with every bit of the money that was about to be turned over to the boss. (Or is it?) Thus he had to make commitments, or go through the fiction of making commitments, well in advance of an undertaking that is shot full of intangibles and unknowables.

IT IS just as though the board of directors of Studebaker had said to Hoffman, "We want you to tell us what your production schedule is for the next 18 months. You must say how many convertibles, how many sedans and how many coupes you will make and how many will be yellow, green, blue and pink. You must tell us how much you will charge for each car and what the profit will be."

Obviously, no motor car president would think of giving final answers to such questions. Compared to the European recovery job, the motor car business is as simple as making mudpies in the back yard.

Now, after he has been on the job for two months, one faction of the board of directors tells the boss that the whole project is to be slashed by 25 per cent. This decree comes down from on high despite the fact that Hoffman and everyone else familiar with the undertaking have said repeatedly that to cut it even a little below the $5,300,000,000 level would make recovery and rehabilitation impossible.

The moral of all this is obvious. It is of no avail to bring in an industrialist—even the ablest industrialist—if he is to be hamstrung by confusion, uncertainty, doubt, snarls of red tape and the harassment of jealousy and suspicion.

There is another faction in the unwieldy board of directors that sits over Hoffman. The spokesman for this faction in the Senate is Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg. This faction must restore the cut in ERP funds and they must see to it that Hoffman gets at least a little of the independence that goes with running a successful industry.

International Festival

In Constitution Hall recently there was presented the International Festival, a panorama of nations displaying gaiety, traditions, customs, folk dances, birthday and wedding celebrations.

As entertainment it was unique, combining the beautiful with the educational. Each nation represented had something to give in its own particular way. In a few hours one was carried around the globe, entering into the spirit of many different peoples.

The festival was so superbly beautiful and inspiring that it deserves a repeat performance soon.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Confusion Of Men

INSOFAR as the damage done by Speaker Martin and Mr. Taber can be repaired at all, it can be repaired only at Philadelphia. For the best that the Senate can do in the next two weeks is to restore the funds which the Republicans who control the House, abetted by the Democrats who chose to be absent, have refused to appropriate. But even if Senator Vandenberg and his colleagues are entirely successful in this, the European Recovery Program will still have been struck a paralyzing blow.

LIPPMANN

The action of the House has shown that within the Republican Party organization the dominating bosses do not accept, and are determined to reverse, the line of foreign policy represented by Vandenberg, Dewey, Stassen, Warren, and even Taft. The action of the House shows also that President Truman has lost all leadership and influence over the bulk of the Democrats. For without the defection of the Democrats, it would not have been possible for Speaker Martin to carry out the coup.

THE OBJECTIVE of the coup is not "economy." Much more than a billion dollars is at stake. The objective of the coup is the control of the Republican Party and of the next Administration. The carefully engineered and ruthlessly executed action in the House last week was the preliminary phase of a larger plan, which will be attempted at Philadelphia,—a plan to defeat the new postwar Republican leaders, to prevent the reconstruction of the party, to make a record and to write a platform and to nominate a ticket which could fit only a Martin, a Bricker, or conceivably Taft.

The Republican bosses who are conducting this campaign are not animated primarily by isolationist convictions but by the knowledge that they can retain their political power only if they can recommit the party to the isolationist position with which they have so long been identified.

FOR THAT reason a mere restoration of the funds, worked out by compromise, will not settle the real issue. It can be settled only if the candidates nominated at Philadelphia, and the platform on which they and the candidates for Senator and Representative are to run, represent clearly the line of policy with which Vandenberg, Dewey, and Stassen are identified. For only then will this country and the world have any reasonable assurance that next year Martin and Taber will not abolish the program which this year they have injured so seriously.

The gravity of the decisions which will be made at the Philadelphia convention can hardly be exaggerated. For there is every prospect that the Republicans will win the election. If they are to win it with their party led or dominated by Speaker Martin and his associates, this country cannot and will not play a leading and constructive role in recovery and in world settlement. An Administration led or dominated by the men who ran wild in the House last Friday evening will be not a national Government but a clearing house for special interests, pressure groups, and lobbyists.

IF THE national Republicans are defeated at Philadelphia, a crisis of enormous depth and scope will develop all over the world. The only hope of arresting and mastering this crisis will lie in a recognition by President Truman that he must step aside in order to lead what would then become a bipartisan movement to draft Eisenhower.

Let us hope that no such desperate expedient as that will be necessary. For after 16 years the country needs a Republican Administration, and not the four years of excitement and confusion which would almost surely result from a draft, an improvised coalition, and the substitution of personal government for responsible party government. But if the Republicans at Philadelphia prove to be incapable of offering the country responsible national party government, then desperate expedients will be necessary.

IN ANY EVENT, though the European Recovery Program is saved, though the Republicans rise to the occasion at Philadelphia, we are and shall be involved in a rapid and exceedingly complex development in the international situation. The action of the House is bound, I venture to think, to accelerate and precipitate developments which would occur anyway—but more slowly and in more manageable form.

The developments turn upon the complicated and reciprocal relations between the Soviet peace offensive on the one hand and, on the other, the great difficulties of the British position at home and in the Commonwealth and Empire, the German crisis which is destined to become a Franco-German, indeed a European crisis, and on the deterioration of the Truman Administration.

IT IS NOT possible to discern and define clearly the shape of these developments. But it is evident that the financial position of Britain, even with full ERP aid, is precarious, and that events like those which have happened in South Africa, the failure of the Arab League policy, and the vulnerability of the sterling area, will call for acts of statesmanship in London and in Washington for which neither is at the moment prepared.

Moreover, the German policy to which Great Britain and this country have committed themselves, though designed to solve the German problem, is almost certain to make it more difficult to solve, and to undermine rather than to consolidate the favorable developments of the past few months in western Europe.

IT IS a great pity that there was not enough wisdom in high places in Washington and London to understand that with the American elections in progress, with the continuity of American policy not yet assured, and with Britain beset by all her difficulties, this was the time to temporize on the German problem, not the time to precipitate a European crisis over Germany.

It makes one think of a statement which I have been told is in an old document of one of the Swiss cantons, that the affairs of the world are governed by the confusion of men and by the providence of God.

Hopes Fade For Vote on Education Bill

All chances of bringing the Federal aid for education bill to a vote in the House by petition are gone—unless Congress meets on June 19 or returns after the Republican and Democratic conventions.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders concede there is little expectation of extending the session or returning later in the year.

The Senate-approved education bill is awaiting action in the House Education and Labor Committee.

Representative Wheeler (D., Ga.) recently filed a petition to force the bill to a vote in the House. Wheeler said fewer than 100 of the required 218 members have signed.

Even if the 218th signature is acquired, House rules provide that the bill cannot be brought to a vote between now and June 18, the tentative adjournment date.

"We'll have to use some other method to get it up," Wheeler said. "And we'r working on some other angles right now, including political pressure on some of these fellows who want to be President."

The bill authorizes a Federal appropriation of 300 million dollars annually to assist States in operating their schools.

Youths Waive Hearing In Thefts From Autos

Preliminary hearing was waived yesterday on five counts of larceny from parked automobiles in the Bladensburg area by two Washington youths in Hyattsville Police Court.

The youths, Leonard D. Yates, 19, of 1716 Capitol ave. ne., and Edward D. Donaldson, 20, of 1427 E st. ne., were released under $500 for appearance for jury trial in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

The pair was arrested by Prince Georges County Detectives Earl J. Huber and Richard A. Pearson.

Real Estate Licenses Suspended 2 Weeks

The District Real Estate Commission yesterday suspended the real estate brokers' licenses of Francis E. and Joseph R. Murray, operators of the Murray Co. at 1229 L st. nw., for a two-week period as the result of a public hearing held May 19.

The brokers were charged with taking an "unreasonable" time to remit rental money to a client, Lawrence Watson, owner of three apartment buildings in the 2100 block of Newport pl. nw.

AndersonFaces Quiz on Grain Buying 'Leaks'

Former Secretary of Agriculture Anderson will be asked to tell a House committee if there were any leaks about the Government's grain-buying program last winter.

The special House committee headed by Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), which has been investigating speculation in commodities since December, decided to call Anderson yesterday.

The decision was made after Malcolm Lamborne, jr., a reporter for the Washington Evening Star, had testified that Anderson had told him that word of the Government's halt in its buying last January had "gotten out." A break in the market followed.

2 Girls Burned Trying to Put Out Fire in Old Hotel

Two 15-year-old Forest Glen, Md., girls were severely burned when they attempted to put out a fire in an abandoned hotel near their homes.

They were Lucy Anne Baldwin and Frances Willis, both of Holman ave., Forest Glen. They promised the owner of the building they would watch it for vandals.

Their parents yesterday said the girls were attracted to the fire Sunday night by barking of "Pat," a schnauzer dog owned by Mrs. Sherwood Royston.

Racing to the building, the girls tried to stomp out the blaze in a closet but were burned and forced to retreat.

The Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, called to the scene, quickly put out the blaze. Lucy suffered first and second degree burns over most of her body. Her hair also was burned. Frances suffered first and second leg burns. Both girls were treated at Washington Sanitarium and removed to their homes.

Trouble With Britain

By Sumner Welles

Need For First Things First

AN IDENTITY of purpose on the part of the United States and Great Britain is essential if the English-speaking peoples are ever to see that kind of a world order for which they have fought in two world wars.

Notwithstanding Prime Minister Attlee's summary denial, the relations between the two countries have suffered serious damage.

What needs searching inquiry on both sides of the Atlantic is whether Palestine is not a symptom rather than a cause of this deterioration in Anglo-American understanding.

Both countries continue to assert that their policies are primarily directed toward the growth of the United Nations so that it may afford security, freedom and prosperity to all peoples.

In reality both countries are reverting to nationalism. They have sought increasingly to use the United Nations as an instrument to serve their individual interests rather than the interests of the international community. The policies of Britain and the United States, like those of Russia, are contributing to the breakdown of the United Nations. All three governments are following the example set by the major powers after the first World War, when their shortsighted selfishness destroyed the League of Nations.

THE THREE billion dollar credit and the help now being given under the European Recovery Program have been granted Britain because we know that the British economy must be bolstered for the sake of world recovery. Yet during this same critical period the United States disrupted Britain's economic planning by canceling lend-lease without notice; attached conditions to the original credit which nullified many of its benefits; and is now inclined to employ ERP as a means of influencing Britain to shape her economic policies to suit American prejudices. To cap the climax, the House of Representatives has emasculated the Trade Agreements Act.

If Smoot-Hawley isolationism dictates American tariff policy, neither Britain nor any other democracy will recover.

At the same time that we are appropriating billions of dollars in order to further British recovery, we are simultaneously insisting upon a series of narrowly selfish measures which threaten to make our help of little, if any, lasting benefit. While we are paying lip service to the cause of economic and financial cooperation under the United Nations, in our bilateral relations with other countries we are frequently taking action which impedes international cooperation and stifles world recovery.

ALTHOUGH the nature of the harm which British policy has done to the United Nations is distinct, its extent is even greater. Mr. Bevin seems to be convinced that British interests will be better served by the reestablishment of a balance of power than by the construction of a world order that can guarantee collective security.

For this reason that close-knit federation of the 16 nations of western Europe which could be the most salutary of the results of the European Recovery Program has been blocked by British opposition.

In order to insure British domination of the Middle East, Mr. Bevin is determined that Cyprus must be kept from Greece and that the former Italian colonies of North Africa must not be returned to Italian administration, however much this might conduce to Mediterranean stability and world peace. These territories are to be British bastions.

For the same reason neither justice to the Jews nor the welfare of Palestine has had any weight with Mr. Bevin.

THERE IS no sorrier chapter in the history of American foreign policy than the record of this country's policy toward Palestine. But British policy, impregnated as it has been by Mr. Bevin's bitter prejudices, has dealt the greatest blow yet struck at the structure of the United Nations. By the financial and military support she has given to the Arab states, by her efforts within the Security Council to condone their aggression and their defiance of the authority of the United Nations, the Britain of Mr. Bevin has done as much to lessen humanity's chances of attaining collective security as did the Britain of Sir John Simon a generation ago when she prevented the League of Nations from halting Japan's aggression against China.

By persisting in policies that they so shortsightedly regard as being to their individual advantage, both Britain and the United States are undermining the foundations of the United Nations. They are also thereby preparing the way for conflicts of interest between them which would soon make impossible any enlightened form of cooperation.

Palestine is primarily a dramatic warning that the English-speaking nations are failing to put first things first.

There is a loud demand that Moscow and Washington get together. Is it not even more urgent that London and Washington get together upon a common policy which will make their acts correspond to their oft-reiterated assertions that the success of the United Nations is their first objective?

Unless such an identity of purpose determines the policies of the English-speaking powers, that ideal of a United Nations capable of maintaining peace under law, upon which the hopes of all free peoples have been fixed, will once more become increasingly remote.

Gang Parole Ruling Near

By The Associated Press

The Federal Parole Board promised yesterday to decide by June 19 whether to revoke the paroles of four former members of the Al Capone gang.

A demand for early action was made by a House Executive Expenditures Committee which has been investigating the paroles off and on since last September.

The former gangsters, Louis Campagna, Philip D'Andrea, Paul Ricca and Charles Gioe, were convicted of conspiracy to extort one million dollars from the movie industry by threats of violence.

The Parole Board released them last August after they had served about one third of their 10-year sentences.

Fred S. Rogers, a member of the board, told the committee a decision on whether to revoke the paroles will be made not later than the end of next week. The two other members, Boleslau J. Monkiewicz and George K. Killinger, concurred.

Chairman Hoffman (R., Mich.) of the committee said there is a possibility that even if the paroles are revoked, the men may be able to stay out of prison through court action until their sentences expire.

Killinger, who joined the board May 18, said from his study of the case he regards it as "a very serious situation"

Citizens to Demand Flood Curb in N. E.

The Minnesota Center Citizens Association voted last night to demand District action to alleviate flood conditions in the area around Benning rd. and Minnesota ave. ne.

The group, meeting at All Saints Chapel, authorized drafting of a letter to the Commisisoners demanding "immediate action" to curb what it termed a serious health and safety hazard resulting from inadequate drainage facilities in the area.

Action was taken after President G. Walter Johnson read a letter from the Benning Businessmen's Association, in which the business group estimated damage resulting from floods in the area May 30 at more than $100,000. Principal damage was done to business properties and to more than a dozen automobiles which were inundated in a theater parking lot, the letter said.

In voting to ask the Commissioners to act, the civic group pointed out that the flood conditions not only threaten additional property damage but constitute a potential health menace because of epidemic threats created by disruption of the sewage system.

Mount Pleasant Unit To Oppose School Closing

The Mount Pleasant Citizens Association will oppose the closing of Powell Junior High School and the use of the building to house Bell Vocational School, Association President Arthur Kimberly said yesterday.

Closing of the school, now used below capacity, will force the transfer of children to other schools so far from their homes that they will have to use streetcars and buses, he said.

Enrollments in grade schools in the area are increasing assuring that the school will be used to capacity within a few years, Kimberly said.

Members of the association will attend a meeting Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Powell, Hiatt pl. and Lamont st. nw., when Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning will discuss the proposal. The meeting was called by the Powell Home and School Association.

Budget a Secret

Takoma Park Retains $1.20 Tax Rate

The Takoma Park City Council last night retained the present tax rate of $1.20 on the $100 evaluation for the coming fiscal year, but declined to reveal total expenditures proposed in the new budget.

Although refusing to reveal the new budget figure following last night's executive session, the council announced it will hold a public hearing within the next week, and will make the figure public at that time. The meeting will be called by Councilman J. H. Nies, designated as finance chairman by Mayor John C. Post.

500 Librarians At Convention Hear Daniels

Jonathan Daniels, author and one-time aide to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, last night said Americans are caught between too many warnings.

"The Army and the Navy are telling us that it is the late afternoon of the atom, while the statesmen of the States' rights, or tidelands oil, power, water, forest, real estate and Jim Crow are insisting that it's too early to make a nation out of America."

Daniels spoke before some 500 delegates to the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Special Libraries Association, in five-day meeting at Hotel Statler.

Paraphrasing Winston Churchill's onetime warning that the frontier of security is on the Rhine, Daniels editor of The Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, said; "Today that frontier of security is on the Potomac."

"In that," he added, "is the basis for both the world hope and plenty of basis, too for the world's fear.

"Sometimes as a citizen looks at the Capitol today it is hard to be certain whether we need to be most afraid of the Russians or of ourselves."

Earlier yesterday, convention delegates toured the Library of Congress, the Capitol and the Government Printing Office. Today they are slated to visit libraries at many Government units, including the Agriculture Department, Smithsonian Institution and the Department of Commerce.

Hyattsville Asks Street Improvement

Hyattsville City Council last night voted to ask Prince Georges County Commissioners to speed up its Hamilton st. improvement program.

The council, describing the street's condition as "extremely hazardous," especially for school children, urged the County official "to construct sidewalks at least," if rapid completion is impossible.

A bid of $7000, reduced by Bartholomew Associates, city planners, from $17,000, to study the physical layout of Hyattsville and recommend improvements, was discussed by the City Council, but no action was taken.

Mayor Caesar L. Aiello said no action on the survey would be taken until citizens have a chance to be heard

Cabbie Who Blocked Fire Trucks Fined

Edward M. Elliott, 30, Beltsville, Md., cab driver, was fined $5 and costs last night by Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens, in Hyattsville Police Court, on a charge of failure to give the right of way to fire apparatus.

Elliott, it was testified, kept in front of two fire trucks en route to a forest fire near Beltsville, on May 29, for more than a mile. He said he did not hear the sirens.

Business Outlook

U. S., on Capital-Goods Jag, Sows Tomorrow's Depression

By J. A. Livingston

NOW, IN THE MIDDLE of full employment, full profits, full dinner pails, and rich living, you can see the coming of the next depression. You see it between the lines of the annual reports of great American corporations, in the Federal Reserve Board's study of consumer aspirations, in the appropriations of Congress, State Legislatures, City Councils, yes, and in your own bank account and budget.

Livingston

So let's try to look at ourselves as others — perhaps Joe Stalin — may look at us. Let's try to see what makes the difference between Men Wanted signs and job layoffs, between increased dividends and business failures, between optimism and pessimism. A good man to start off with is Walter A. Gifford, chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. You read these words in his 1947 annual report to shareholders:

"Total expenditures for new construction were $1,185,000,000, compared with $690,000,000 in 1946 and $255,000,000 in 1945 . . . The Bell System required large amounts of new capital. More than $1,100,000,000 was obtained during the year . . . We are exerting every effort to reach the goal of giving everyone service when he wants it."

ATT is not unique. Standard Oil (New Jersey), E. I. duPont de Nemours, General Motors, the Pennsylvania Railroad are trying to operate with greater precision and smoothness and with less rush-rush anxiety to meet postwar demand for goods and services. They're adding capacity.

THE INDIVIDUAL'S at the bottom of it. The householder's vacuum cleaner, or washing machine, or refrigerator wore out during the war years. Automobiles acquired rust and loose-jointedness. Housing became inadequate, old-fashioned.

Peace has been with us nearly three years, yet people still seek the ease they dreamt of during the war. And they're borrowing to get it—even as the big corporations. The Federal Reserve reports that about 40 per cent of furniture, refrigerators and similar durable-goods purchases in '48 will be made with borrowed money. And mortgage money, as usual, will be necessary for homes. Only one out of five prospective housebuyers expects to pay cash.

This frenzy to enjoy the blessings of peace extends to Congressmen, State legislators, and aldermen. When roads are crowded, their cars travel at a snail's pace too. When houses can't be built till streets are laid or sewers dug, they know it. So it's hardly strange that Engineering News-Record reports construction contracts of State and local governments up 49 per cent over last year; Federal contracts are up 84 per cent.

SOCIETY is on a capital goods jag. That causes Westinghouse, or Bendix, or General Motors to increase facilities. They want to fill demand while it's still there. It impels government bodies to increase expenditures on roads, schools, and such like.

But some day, homes will be stocked with electrical appliances. The automobile population, instead of growing, will remain more or less static. Demand will consist largely of replacements. We will have extended our road systems and made local improvements. We will have enlarged our educational system, built hospitals. And we will have on our hands an industrial plant which was built in part to satisfy this great pent-up demand for capital goods.

That is the dim outline of distant tomorrow—not '48 or '49, but some years later. Steel mills will start to bank furnaces. Manufacturers of industrial equipment and durable consumer goods will lay off workers. For that, John Maynard Keynes bequeathed a remedy: Let the government take up the slack; let the Federal Government have a shelf of public works ready to prop up the economy.

A fine idea. But that means that we ought to postpone less urgent public projects till we need them to support employment and purchasing power. At a time like this, when corporations and individuals are building up their plant and equipment, government should save work for a rainy day.

Austin Sees Truman as Party Choice

That President Truman will be the Democratic nominee was described "a foregone conclusion" last night by F. Byrne Austin, Democratic congressional candidate in Maryland's Sixth District.

Austin spoke at a dinner of the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club at the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw.

"It's just a question of whether we'll for Truman now or later," he said. The recent indorsement of the President by the Maryland State Democratic convention undoubtedly will help Mr. Truman achieve the nomination, Austin declared.

Although no Montgomery County resident has been elected Sixth District representative since the Civil War, Austin, who lives in Takoma Park, said he was "greatly encouraged" and claimed he would receive the District's labor vote.

Austin is opposing incumbent Representative J. Glenn Beall, Republican, of Frostburg, Md.

'Protestant Hour' Here, Says Pastor

Communism prospers where protestantism is weakest, Dr. J. M. Dawson, executive secretary of public relations for Northern and Southern Baptist Churches, declared yesterday.

Addressing Baptist ministers from Washington and Richmond at Fredericksburg, Dr. Dawson declared "the Protestant hour is here." He said the indication of collapse of artificiality, the growing cooperation among Protestant groups, and the changing moral and political climate of the world toward democracy all are indications that "the Protestant hour is here."

About 40 clergymen from Washington and Richmond attended the meeting and voted to hold their next meeting here in the fall. Presiding ministers were Dr. J. H. Ivey of Richmond and Dr. Herbert Baucom of Takoma Park Baptist Church.

Tobacco Men Honor Retired U. S. Official

A veteran Government employe of Falls Church, Va., received the praise of tobacco warehousemen from five Southern States yesterday at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

He was Charles E. Gage, 66, who retired June 1 as director of the U. S. Agriculture Department's tobacco branch. He served with the Agriculture Department for 42 years. A testimonial dinner for Gage was one of the highlights of the three-day convention of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association.

Beall Calls Hearing On Parking Rates

Represenative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md., yesterday called a hearing for 10 a. m. Wednesday on high Washington rates for parking.

Beall, chairman of the House District Subcommittee, said he felt the rates were too high. He said he had invited testimony from sponsors and opponents of a bill to let the District expand its off-street parking program. The hearing will be in room 446, Old House Office Building.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—Wheat prices were weighed down by the rapidly advancing harvest in the Southwest today. Losses averaging around a cent were enough to send May, 1949, wheat to a new seasonal low. The 1948 contracts hovered only a few cents above the Government loan level.

Corn and oats ignored the weakness of wheat. Both feed grains were firm throughout the session, despite the fact that the Midwest received needed showers over the weekend. Traders said most buying particularly in corn, apparently came from previous short sellers.

Wheat finished ⅝ to 1¼ lower, July 2.29@2.29½; corn was ⅛ to 1½ higher, July 2.16@2.16⅞; oats were ⅛ lower to 1 cent higher, July 93⅛@93¼, and soybeans were 1½ higher, July 4.17½.

Croft Named First Boston's Manager Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Edward S. Croft, jr., has been named manager of the Washington office of First Boston Corp., effective immediately. He succeeds Lucius F. Hallet who resigned to become associated with the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Boston.

Croft

Croft has been assistant manager of First Boston's office here since it was opened two years ago. A native of Atlanta, Ga., he graduated from The Citadel in Charleston, S. C. After a brief period of Government employment, he joined the New York office of First Boston in 1937. He served as a major in Army antiaircraft during the war.

Croft reported that First Boston Corp. made a secondary offering of 50,000 shares of Potomac Electric Power Co. after the close of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday. Priced at 13¼, the issue was far oversubscribed and Croft described the demand locally as "terrific." Allocations are expected to be about 25 per cent of subscriptions.

The 50,000-share block of Pepco is believed to be the balance held by North American Co., which previously has distributed its Pepco holdings in the form of stock dividends.

OFFERING: United Air Lines announced it will make an offering of 369,618 shares of common stock to present common stockholders on June 28. They will be offered one share of new stock for each five shares now held. Price of new stock will be announced on offering date. Any stock not taken by present shareholders will be offered to company employes on a formal involving seniority and compensation. The issue will be handled by a group of underwriters headed by Harriman, Ripley and Co., Inc.

GREENBRIER ECHOES: The 340 attendance at the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., convention of D. C. bankers was the largest in association history . . . That red hat bobbing about on the Greenbrier golf course was on the head of Robert V. Fleming . . . George A. Didden pitched one horseshoe that landed 20 feet up and remained in the branches of a tree . . . Gen. Omar Bradley's golf drives were the talk of the convention . . . There was a lengthy delay at Saturday's session when one of the speakers, not knowing he was scheduled early, stopped off for a massage . . . Christopher H. Pope surprised everybody, including himself, by winning one of the golfing trophies . . . Two water hazards consumed plenty of the bankers' golf balls.

WITHDRAWAL: The Treasury will withdraw $815,000,000 from its deposit accounts with private banks on June 15 and 16, it announced yesterday. Notice was served on the banks through the Federal Reserve System that four fifths of that sum will be taken out June 15 and the remaining one fifth the following day.

HOME BUILDING: May construction of private homes totaled 575 million dollars, a gain of 10 per cent over April and 62 per cent over May of last year, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. Total new building of all kinds was valued at $1,449,000,000 for May, up 11 per cent over April and 40 per cent over May last year. The April to May increase was described as "slightly less than the normal seasonal gain" between those months. Industrial building was the only class of privately financed construction to show a decerase. Totaling 114 million dollars in May, it was 2 per cent under April and 19 per cent under May last year.

BROKERS' LOANS: The New York Stock Exchange announced total borrowings by member firms on all types of collateral increased to $385,807,954, as of May 28, compared with $310,559,873 on April 30. Money borrowed on United States Government obligations as collateral increased to $153,653,238 at the end of last month from $95,176,285 the previous month. Borrowings on all other types of collateral also expanded to $232,134,716 from $215,383,588.

ODD LOTS: Stockholders of Texas Gas Transmission Corp. will vote June 28 on a proposal to increase the currently authorized two million shares of capital stock to 3,100,000 with 100,000 shares being preferred with $100 par value. Proceeds will finance a proposed $79,300,000 expansion of operating system . . . N. Y. Central has ordered 30 new electric commutation trains to serve suburban areas . . . Textron, Inc., has bought all assets of the Esmond Mills, Inc., in exchange for 139,508 shares of its $1.25 convertible preferred stock and the assumption by Textron of all Esmond liabilities . . . Willys-Overland announced that starting August 1 bodies for its jeep station wagon and station sedan will be furnished by Briggs Manufacturing Co., instead of Hayes Manufacturing Co. . . . Armstrong Cork Co. has reduced factory prices of rubber tile and linotile . . . International Harvester Co. has advanced prices from 2.5 to 14.8 per cent on its wheel-type farm tractor.

'Get Facts,' Students Told By Marshall

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 7 (AP).—Secretary of State Marshall advised college students tonight to guard their emotions and try to get at the "true facts" before forming judgments on foreign affairs.

"We Americans are sometimes inclined to emotional reactions, which can be very dangerous in matters concerned with international relationships," he said.

In this country's relations with others, he said it was necessary to procede "in a careful and guarded manner" and to take a long view of the future.

Marshall, in an address prepared for University of North Carolina commencement exercises, kept away from specific current issues, explaining they "are either in such a delicate state of negotiation or in complete stalemate that it is inadvisible for me to engage in public discussions, except insofar as may be necessary to keep the people of this country reasonably advised of the general situation."

Urging that students and those fresh from academic halls "inform themselves" on the United States' current role in the world, Marshall advised:

"Ascertaining the facts cannot be done by mere superficial reading of a single newspaper or listening to your favorite radio broadcaster. There is so much confusion and at times special pleading, that it is exceedingly difficult to get at the true facts.

"Also, we must contend with the recognized fact that a murder has much more of news value than the details of a peaceful settlement of a difficulty. Therefore, there is a strong tendency to accentuate, to exaggerate, those phrases or incidents in our international dealings that will stimulate interest from the viewpoint of excitement rather than of factual understanding."

Court Voids 7000 Standard Oil Contracts

Los Angeles, June 7 (AP).—Standard Oil's exclusive marketing contracts with some 7000 independent service stations in the West were ruled illegal today.

U. S. District Judge Leon R. Yankwich held such agreements to be in restraint of trade under the Sherman and Clayton Acts. Attorneys for the U. S. Department of Justice, who prosecuted the anti-trust case, predicted it would force revamping of the Nation's entire oil distribution setup.

In addition to Standard of California, some 23,000 other Western service stations with similar agreements with other oil companies are expected to be involved, antitrust division attorneys said. Distribution as well as production agreements alleged by the Government to be monopolistic are charged in a suit involving all major oil companies now pending in Washington, D. C.

Judge Yankwich provided that his restraining injunction shall not go into force until six months after final appeal in the matter. He did so, he explained, so orderly marketing by the oil industry will not be interfered with until the matter is finally settled.

Kensington Elects Daymude Mayor

Leonard Daymude, a plumbing contractor, yesterday was elected mayor of Kensington, Md., by a margin of seven votes over Howard Bean, Bureau of Standards employe.

Daymude polled 191 to 184 for his opponent.

Town council seats went to Mrs. Mildred Harman, editor of a Kensington newspaper, who polled 226 votes; and James A. I. Parker, druggist, with 218. Other candidates for the two council posts were Douglas Birchby, bank employe, who received 161 votes and Robert Caviness, an attorney, who polled 130.

He succeeds Col. C. V. Sayer, who resigned after serving four terms.

Kaufman Losing His Capitol Kay

By Richard L. Coe

EVERYBODY'S GOIN' PLACES: Kay DeWitt, the cute little apple who's been singing so happily with Sam Jack Kaufman's band at the Capitol 40 weeks out of the last 52, takes off soon for Schroon Lake, N. Y. . . . But Kay will be back at the Capitol come October 1 . . . Kay was good to start with, but she's worked out a mighty swell, smooth style, so smooth that last week at a New York audition they'd planned to ask her to sing two numbers; she wound up by doing 17 . . . And just a year ago Kay was a school teacher . . . She taught the seventh grade over in Arlington and still thinks of Arlington as a dream place . . . The Capitol wolves may be surprised to know that Kay's married, and it's marriage with Big Romance . . . Jim DeWitt is a G. W. medical student; when he was in the Navy during the war, Kay followed him around singing to the boys in blue . . . Last week's audition brought her a four-month contract at New York's summer resort, Schroon Lake, and the best thing about the deal is that the DeWitts won't be separated; he'll be the big hotel's assistant manager for the summer . . . Another Kay is mighty pleased about all this—Kay Ford, into whose talent office Kay walked just as Arlington youngsters last year were singing "No more teachers, no more books." . . . Bet they're surprised that instead of having to face Mrs. DeWitt as a teacher, they now pay their way to watch her smile as the Cap's bouncing chantootsie, whose photo is THAT BIG on F st. . . . Have a nice summer, Kay.

HELEN HAYES sails today for that London debut in "The Glass Menagerie," but she'll long remember Saturday night's performance of "Alice" out at Olney . . . Miss Hayes missed her cue in the last act . . . And who, of all the people in the world, was caught on stage with nothing to say, but her own daughter, Mary MacArthur . . . At that point Mary had a scene with Virginia Low and Donald Murphy; Helen was supposed to sweep on stage into her daughter's arms . . . But no Helen . . . Don Murphy picked up the ball . . . Remembering that this was an English comedy, the guy shouted: "Guess I'll pop off for a cup of tea" . . . Don found Star Hayes in her dressing room reading a book . . . It's one of those things that almost never happens, and only after the scene got going again did anyone bust up and start laughing . . . And Helen was the first to laugh.

BROCK PEMBERTON'S due back in town after a 10-day absence which, among other things, took him to San Francisco for one performance as Elwood P. Dowd in Joe E. Brown's company of "Harvey" . . . Joe wanted off to see his daughter graduate from college; next night Rudy Vallee took over Joe's company, after which Rudy succeeds James Dunn in New York's "Harvey" . . . Keeping the eyes on three "Harvey" companies takes a pack of traveling.

MRS. TONY MUTO can now spend more time at the Mutos' Annapolis farm . . . The Senate has now passed HR 5065 . . . This is the bill introduced in the House by Representative Edward A. Mitchell (R., Ind.), exempting hospitalized servicemen and hospitalized vets from paying an admission tax on amusement tickets that are given to them free . . . It's been a long pull; the bill began its journey last January . . . Mrs. Muto's been nudging the Hillfolk about it regularly and up there they give her a lot of credit for seeing to it the bill didn't get lost in the legislative shuttle . . . It may seem minor to you, but, until it was passed, giving hospital servicemen and vets free tickets was virtually impossible . . . Complicated life, isn't it? . . . Enjoy Annapolis, Mrs. M.

THREE LOEW BOYS move up on F st. . . . In a trio of promotions, Loewtotum Carter Barron announces that Jack Foxe, formerly manager of the Columbia, is now director of publicity and advertising for the three Loew houses on F st. . . . Irving Martin, formerly assistant manager at the Capitol, takes over the manager's office at the Columbia . . . William Riding, who began as an usher only eight years ago at the Capitol, moves into Martin's old spot, which is fast going for any young man. A lowly private in the usher corps to the three stars of an assistant commander.

FULLER BRUSH MEN will be moving up, too, today . . . Up to the sixth floor of the Warner Building, where this afternoon they'll take a look at Red Skelton as, of all things, a Fuller Brush Man.

TRYOUTS tonight and Wednesday night for a projected Sylvan Theater production of "Joan of Lorraine," by the Washington Theater Alliance . . . All members of the drama groups represented by the alliance are invited to these two nightly tryouts; 8 o'clock's the hour; the dramatic hall of the Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., is the place.

FINAL MEETING of the season for the D. C. Motion Picture Council will be held this morning at the YWCA, 17th and K sts., at 11 o'clock . . . On the agenda is the annual election of officers and a talk by Arch Mercey, who's just returned from Lake Success, where he's been working with the subcommittee on visual aids.

WESTERN HIGH scholars will be seeing an all-Western High musical this morning, Lowell Swortzell's "Outlaw Days" . . . Western's Drama Club has been plugging at this original effort for some months and it sounds like a merry way to start a day.

HE'S TOO OLD: Maurice Chevalier pursues this bright-looking Marcelle Derrien in "Le Silence Est D'Or," but he reluctantly realizes he's a bit long in the tooth for her. The comedy, directed by Rene Clair, opens Wednesday at the Little

Nats Trounce Chisox, 7-1, Behind Scarborough

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Baseball Off the Cuff:

THE PICTURE is becoming a bit clearer in the American League. The Cleveland Indians are demonstrating they are no flash-in-the-pan outfit, but a solid pennant threat; the Yankees' pitching has found a stimulant in Vic Raschi's seven straight wins; the Athletics are flattening out somewhat, and the Red Sox are beginning to move.

POVICH

The best thing the Indians have done all season was to move into Philadelphia and deflate the A's in three straight games. In previous years Cleveland teams have folded against the league leaders, but this apparently is a Cleveland club of another stripe. They showed better pitching than Connie Mack's club, beat his ace, Phil Marchildon, and sprayed home runs all over Shibe Park like a power outfit.

Boston was the club of the week, though. At long last, the Red Sox batting order that was supposed to hit, began to hit and won five in a row to fan pennant fever anew in Boston. The Red Sox are still 9½ games out of the lead, and their pitching is highly suspect, but that Boston lineup otherwise could be a wrecking crew. Even when they weren't hitting, Bobby Doerr, Johnny Pesky, Stan Spence, Ted Williams, Vern Stephens and Dom DiMaggio looked like the blueprinte of dynamite.

IF THE YANKEES win the pennant, and that would be no upset, Bucky Harris' label as the best manager in the league would be enhanced but he'd also have to be known as the luckiest. Harris' good fortune in his reserves has been boundless. Except for pitching, the Yankees are deeper than any other club in the league and it is paying off handsomely.

When Charley Keller suffered broken bones in his hand it was the type of injury to wreck another club. Not the Yankees, though. Harris had merely to nod in the direction of Johnny Lindell, and he had a left fielder whose play has been even more valuable than Keller's. Yankee reserves are indeed wonderful. When the Nats were in New York, the Yanks had in Lindell a man on their bench who had hit as many home runs (five) as the whole Washington team collectively.

When Shortstop Phil Rizzuto was hurt, Harris wasn't quite distraught. Off his bench he prodded Bobby Brown, who immediately amassed the best batting average on the Yankee club. When George Stirnweiss was beaned, Harris merely moved Brown to second base. When George McQuinn showed signs of combat fatigue at first base, Harris simply moved in Home Run Hitter Steve Souchock.

THE SADDEST figure in the National League, unless it is Leo Durocher, must be Harry Walker, the batting champion of last year who can't break into the Phillies' lineup. Walker has been benched for, of all things, non-hitting.

Walker's case is of a kind with that of Mickey Vernon who would have been benched for non-hitting last season if the Nats had had an adequate first base replacement. Vernon, after leading the league at bat the year before, was no threat in 1947.

The clue may be that they are the same type of hitters—aiming their blows into left field. Their hits dropped safely for them in their good years, but their averages take awful drops when they don't have the same good luck. Neither Walker nor Vernon is of a piece with Ted Williams, who is hitting to left field these days with the wide open spaces available to him. Vernon and Walker are not hitting against any Boudreau shift.

Walker has one edge on Vernon. He hasn't been booed yet by the Philadelphia fans. Griffith Stadium customers have lately taken to booing Vernon but that connotes more displeasure toward Vernon than dislike for him. It's merely a manifestation that they want him to hit.

AT TIME WHEN the Nats are in desperate need of a shortstop who can lend some batting power to the club, they can scan their farm teams and see only one impressive hitter and he's an outfielder—Larry Drake of Chattanooga.

Drake, who had a tryout with the Nats in Florida, is a hot article in the Southern Association. He just ended a hitting streak that took him through 37 consecutive games and apparently he's something of a rise-to-the-occasion guy. They gave him a "Larry Drake Day" at Chattanooga on Sunday and he responded to the adulations of the home fans by banging two home runs.

He's the pride of Joe Cambria, who brought him out of the Big State Texas League. But as always in the case of a guy on a hitting streak, Drake had a couple of breaks in the luck. A week ago he was being shut out at Birmingham in the first game of a doubleheader when he beat out an infield hit because the pitcher forgot to cover the bag. In the second game that day, he was hitless and on his last chance with the bases loaded he popped up, but the catcher dropped the ball, and given that reprieve Drake banged out a hit to keep his streak alive.

Ned Garver Hurls Browns To 5-3 Win Over Yanks

New York, June 7 (AP).—Rookie Righthander Ned Garver pitched the St. Louis Browns to a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees today to end a six-game St. Louis losing streak.

Garver was tapped for 11 hits, including homers by Johnny Lindell, Phil Rizzuto and three singles by Joe DiMaggio, but he had it in the clutch.

Browns Score Two

After Lindell homered in the third to break a scoreless tie, the Brownies, aided by Bobby Brown's error, scored twice in the fourth to take the lead.

George Binks, recently obtained from Philadelphia, opened the Brownie fourth with a bunt single. He zipped to third as Paul Lehner's grounder went through Brown.

After Chuck Stevens popped out, Moss rammed a single to center to score Binks and send Lehner to third. Garver flied to left and Lehner tallied after the catch to put the Browns ahead.

Lehner Hits Homer

Lehner slammed his first homer of the year in the sixth to increase St. Louis' margin to 3-1. Rizzuto shortened the gap with his second four-bagger of the season in the seventh.

The Brownies wrapped up the game by scoring twice in the ninth on a hit batter, singles by Gerry Priddy and Whitey Platt, an error by Billy Johnson and Lehner's fly ball.

Bribery Case Set June 24

Winston-Salem, N. C., June 7 (AP).—Municipal Court Judge Leroy W. Sams today set June 24 as the date for bribery charge hearings for Ed Weingarten, W. C. McWaters and Barney DeForge.

Charged with a conspiracy to "throw the game" played here May 14 between the Reidsville and Winston-Salem baseball teams, the three men have posted bonds.

Weingarten, official of the Florence (S. C.) Club of the Tri-State League and the Leaksville Club of the Class D Blue Ridge League, and DeForge, manager and pitcher of the Reidsville Club of the Carolina League, have been barred from baseball for life.

They were ousted June 1 in a decision by President George M. Trautman of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs (minor) after a hearing in Columbus, Ohio.

McWaters, a used-car dealer of Clover, S. C., surrendered Saturday to police in Charlotte.

Victory Is 5th for Ray; Griffs Take 4th Place

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats and the heavens poured it on the White Sox last night. The Nats rained hits on 'em and the skies rained rain, and it added up to a lop-sided, 7-1 victory for Washington before a seventh-inning torrent wrote finis to the proceedings.

So suddenly did the hefty shower strike, the stadium ground crew was caught with its tarpaulin up, and so water-logged it could not be spread on the diamond.

The infield was a shimmering lake within 10 minutes, and a bit later when the rain quit, Umpire-in-chief Art Pasarella gingerly stuck a testing toe into the muddy base lines and said the game was off.

But the Nats' victory was virtually a foregone conclusion by that time though. Ray Scarborough was holding the White Sox tight in the grip of his four-hit pitching, and the only run he did permit stemmed from a three-base error by Mickey Vernon.

Last Run Counts

The Nats had just picked up their seventh run when the rains came in the seventh and it went into the records despite failure to complete the inning, under the rule providing that all scores count to the moment of stoppage of play if the home team is leading.

Their victory, witnessed by 5909 fans, lifted the Nats out of a triple tie with Boston and Detroit for fourth place, into undisputed possession of same.

Manager Teddy Lyons of the White Sox sent Bob Gillespie, the Nats' victim of the opening game of the series, to the mound for the White Sox, and the Nats rapped him for their first five runs, before dispatching him at the end of three innings.

Vernon Makes 3-Base Error

Scarborough, who walked six batters, bore down impressively when the White Sox did threaten and he lost his shutout only because Baker's ground ball got away from Vernon for three bases at the start of the fifth. Pat Seerey's single scored the Sox's lone run of the night.

When the first two Sox reached base in the sixth, Scarborough extricated himself neatly by grabbing Baker's smash into the box and starting a double play via Christman and Vernon.

Christman drove in the Nats' first run with their first hit of the game, in the second inning. He singled to right after Stewart drew a walk and was forced by Vernon, who reached second on an infield out.

All of a sudden after two were out in the third, the Nats got tough and wrenched four runs out of Gillespie with four solid hits. Kozar and Coan singled to center and Stewart scored them both with a line double to left.

Stewart Doubles In Pair

Vernon was handed an intentional pass and Gillenwater swung from the heels to double over Philley's head for two more runs.

Searborough put their sixth run in motion by leading off the fourth with a single to center and he scored from third when Coan beat out a hit to Lupien with a burst of speed.

Kozar and Coan boosted their batting averages in the seventh just before the rain moved in. Kozar led off against Al Gettel, the third Sox pitcher with a double to left-center and Coan scored him with a single over second.

IN SHORT . . . Outfielder Tom McBride caught batting practice for the Nats . . . With Al Evans ailing, McBride is being groomed as a catcher in case of accident to Jake Early . . . Don Kolloway was in luck in the third inning when he ended up with a single. He broke his bat on the hit to short center and Carden Gillenwater slipped and fell twice on the wet turf before narrowly missing the catch . . . White Sox Catcher Aaron Robinson was struck a foul blow in the second inning. A foul off Jake Early's bat bounced off Umpire Boyer's chest protector and thumped the unsuspecting Robinson on the unprotected back of his head . . . The Nats, facing a pitching crisis tonight, will start Sid Hudson against the Browns, despite the fact Hudson was knocked out in the fifth inning on Sunday.

Snead Has 67 in Drill For Open

Los Angeles, June 7 (AP).—Par shattering rounds by Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, Va., and Ted Rhodes, Los Angeles, highlighted practice today as the country's leading pros and amateurs sharpened their games for the start of the U. S. Open golf championship Thursday.

Snead whacked the ball in championship form to post a 33-34—67 while Rhodes, who is the personal golf instructor of boxing champion Joe Louis, equalled this four under par figure.

Par for the unusually long Riviera course, 7020 yards, is 35-36—71. PGA Champion Ben Hogan and favorite to win here coasted in with a 74.

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—Forever Ampere, a sprightly 30-year-old Out Of A Bomb by Nuclear Fission, waddled to a three-length win in the 13th annual Johns Hopkins Hospital Turtle Derby today.

Several thousand non-paying customers cheered in a heavy rain as the entry of the radio isotype laboratory at Sinai Hospital, Baltimore, was awarded the purse—$50 in nickels.

Babe Sets Record—Loses

Pittsburgh, June 7 (AP).—Mildred (Babe) Didrikson Zaharias toured the South Hills Country Club in 74, setting a new women's course record yesterday, but lost an exhibition match.

She and her partner, Dick Shoemaker, tri-State PGA champion, were downed 3 and 2 by Mike Pavella, Washington (Pa.) County Club, and Ted Luther, South Hills pro.

20 of 21 Batters Whiff

Emery, S. Dak., June 7 (AP).—Seventeen-year-old Elroy Huber conducted Emery's baseball game yesterday.

In a seven-inning junior league contest with nearby Bridgewater, the 5-foot, 5-inch right-hander struck out 20 of 21 batters for a no-hit, 25-to-0 victory.

In the fourth inning a Bridgewater batter connected with Huber's fireball. He sent a grounder right back to Huber, who flipped it to first.

Phils Thump Cardinals, 5-1

St. Louis, June 7 (AP).—Two home runs by Dick Sisler provided Dutch Leonard of the Philadelphia Phillies with all the margin he needed to stifle the St. Louis Cardinals tonight, 5 to 1.

Del Ennis also homered for the Phils and Stan Musial's twelfth circuit clout deprived Leonard of a shutout. The defeat forced the Cardinals to vacate first place in favor of the New York Giants, who won from Pittsburgh.

Sisler was obtained from the Cards by the Phillies for Shortstop Ralph La Pointe.

Mrs. Bower Wins Post Cup Tourney

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Mrs. A. B. Bower of Indian Spring Country Club added the Class A Washington Post Trophy to her rapidly growing collection of area championships yesterday at Army-Navy Country Club.

In her second playoff with Mrs. George E. Martin of Manor Club, Mrs. Bower shot a four-over-par 80 over the hilly course to win her second straight Class A tournament.

Par, out	554	543	434—37
Mrs. Bower	665	443	534—40
Mrs. Martin	684	664	444—46
Par, in	453	555	543—39—37—76
Mrs. Bower	454	545	643—40—40—80
Mrs. Martin	464	565	854—50—46—96

Only last week Mrs. Bower captured the NBC Cup play and in the Keefer Cup competition a few weeks previous the Indian Spring star took the low gross award. She won the District title in 1946 and was 1945 Maryland State champion.

A model of consistency, Mrs. Bower's three gross rounds during The Washington Post tournament were 80, 79 and 80.

With her three-stroke handicap, Mrs. Bower yesterday had a 77, while Mrs. Martin, who has risen to the Class A ranks only this season, could do no better than a 96—13—93. In her two previous deadlocks with Mrs. Bower, the Manor golfer had scores of 90—13—77 and 89—13—76.

Bad luck haunted Mrs. Martin yesterday or she would have again been up with Mrs. Bower. On the second, thirteenth and sixteenth holes she carded eights. In each instance her ball found the deep ditch running across the fairways and the resultant penalties caused her score to mount.

Mrs. Bower, meanwhile, was racking up 10 pars and 2 birdies during her steady round. She had 5 bogies and never was more than a stroke above par on any hole.

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—Jim Russell had himself a field day at the plate here today as the Boston Braves beat the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 5. It was the Cubs' sixth straight loss.

The slender outfielder smashed out his sixth and seventh homers of the season and two doubles for four of Boston's seven hits. He drove in five tallies and scored another himself.

Belle Moose Takes Early Lead, Gallops to Victory at Charles Town

Mare Pays $6.40 With Jones Aboard

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Apprentice R. D. Jones, known hereabouts as "Special Delivery," gave Belle Moose an excellent ride today to win the featured Willard Hotel Purse.

The 5-year-old mare, owned by E. L. Miller of Hagerstown, Md., caused a mild upset by beating J. E. Crider's Comedy Player by a length margin. In third position but beaten off was J. K. Wynkoop's Rough Honey.

Comedy Player Favored

With the majority of the betting centered on Comedy Player with Sammy Palumbo up, Belle Moose returned a $6.40 mutuel and was clocked for the 6 furlongs, plus 120 feet, in 1:17 4/5. Although the weather overhead was perfect, the track was muddy as a result of heavy rain last night.

Young Jones, a Georgia boy who learned to ride quarter horses on Florida's grapefruit circuit, took Belle Moose to the front at the first opportunity. The mare shook off Pappy Boy to take command. From that point to the finish the opposition was behind her.

Palumbo had Comedy Player closer than usual early while saving ground. Midway of the backstretch, he placed the choice to strong hand rding and the 7-year-old responded. Comedy Player gradually cut down Belle Moose's lead but after getting a length off the leader the veteran hung.

Jones Rides Two Winners

It was the second victory of the day for the Miller Stable and made it two for Jones, too. He was up on Let 'Em Wander, the winner of the fourth race at a mere $2.60. This filly stepped the about 4½ furlongs in .49 4/5, winning by 10 lengths.

Freddie Katz, the current riding sensation, had his innings which include a victory on R. C. Crist's Miss Brodwood, a $9.60 shot in the second race which put the finishing touches on a $44.20. Daily double after J. O. Teller's Say Sandy had won the first at $5.20.

Jockey Mike Sarno kept Mrs. W. Hunt's Play Stage in front all the way to win the fifth race, a test a mile and an eighth. Play Stage, paying $5.20, led J. K. Wynkoop's Rosedan Home with E. L. Miller's Fluter third.

Loomis Joins Heurich's for Fraser Benefit

Bucky Loomis, University of Maryland pitching star, has been added to the Heurich Brewers' squad in time to meet the All-Stars in the Monk Fraser benefit game Wednesday on the West Ellipse.

Donation tickets for the game are on sale at a dollar each at Atlas and Lowe-Campbell sporting goods stores. No tickets will be sold at the game. All proceeds go to the family of the late Fraser, former local sandlot catcher and outfielder.

The Brewers won the District sandlot championship last year and are a contender for The Washington Post-Industrial League title. The all-stars were picked from teams in the Industrial, Departmental and Eastern Recreation Leagues.

Jersey Tries Comeback as Fight Center

NEWARK, N. J., June 7 (AP).—Fistic center of the country back in the high button shoes and bustles era—but relegated to the "bushes" since New York legalized boxing—New Jersey returns to the fistic big time Wednesday when Rocky Graziano and Tony Zale battle for the middleweight title at Ruppert Stadium.

When the Tournament of Champions decided to stage the fight here because Graziano is banned in his home State, New York, it was viewed as a definite gamble. In recent years promotional ventures in this city of a half million have not met with much success.

As a matter of fact, the last title fight held here back in 1941 when Freddie Cochrane lifted the welterweight crown from Fritzie Zivic, drew a crowd of exactly 8716. Of course, there were few who thought Cochrane would win and that held down the attendance. But still Freddie was a home-towner, hailing from nearby Elizabeth.

HOWEVER, the Tournament of Champions did some high-pressure promoting, and it seems a certainty that the outfit will at least break even. At last reports there was $250,000 in the till, with hopes for the usual last-minute rush for tickets. A gate of about $300,000 is needed if the group is to stay out of the red.

Locale of the show, Ruppert Stadium, home of the Newark Bears of the International League, seats about 18,500. With the ring set up at the pitcher's mound, enough extra seats have been added to make about 31,000. The house is scaled for $500,000 if there is a sellout.

Back in the heyday of boxing in New Jersey, there were several big gates. The tops was the $1,789,238 forked over by some 80,000 persons in 1921 who watched Jack Dempsey crush Georges Carpentier of France at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City.

The next year, Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler fought for the lightweight championship before 54,685, who poured $367,862 into the coffers. Then boxing was legalized in New York, and there began a steady decline of the sport in New Jersey.

Rocky Rules 5-12 Choice Over Zale

New York, June 7 (AP).—Lean and tense at 157 pounds after his final workout, Middleweight Champ Rocky Graziano today was a confident 5-to-12 favorite to whip 34-year-old Tony Zale Wednesday.

Browns Option Wood

Washington's Jerry Hart 2d at 108

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—Ed Finnessy, an amateur from the Mount Pleasant Public Golf Course in Baltimore, won the 27-hole Annapolis Roads Club Open Golf tournament here with a score of 107.

Jerry Hart, Washington amateur representing the host club, was second with a total of 108.

Four professionals, including George Diffenbaugh of Kenwood, and an amateur, Bill Collins of Clifton Park, Baltimore, tied for third place.

George Has Tough Break

Only the worst kind of a bad break kept Diffenbaugh from winning the professional first prize. Standing 103 going into the twenty-seventh hole, Diffenbaugh teed off following a terrific cloudburst.

He was on in three strokes, only to find the green submerged under one-half-inch of water. Using a two-iron to putt with on the flooded surface, the stocky Kenwood pro needed four "chip shots" to get the ball in the cup.

A double-bogey would have won for Diffenbaugh, but his seven put him in a tie at 110 with Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland; Al Jamison of Quantico, and Walter Romans of the Baltimore Country Club for top money.

Dr. Kendrick at 111

Finnessy, who finished ahead of the rains, covered the three rounds of the nine-hole, par 35 layout in 36, 34, 37.

Dr. Joseph Kendrick of Kenwood was the fourth low amateur with 111 and another Kenwood golfer, Dick Melvin was fifth amateur finisher with 112.

Walter Bogley and Al Houghton, Prince Georges pros and Roger Peacock, Sligo Park professional, were the other Washington golfers to finish in the money.

Sixty-four men teed off in the affair, first of its kind held by the Annapolis Roads Club. The club says it will henceforth be a yearly feature.

Alexandria's Ikes Putting In Long Hours on Fish Pond

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

THERE'S more to fishing than just fishing.

Some 135 anglers of the Alexandria Chapter of the Izaak Walton League will attest to this. They're doubling as construction workers on a project that's for the benefit of all.

Utilizing their Sundays and off-hours, the Waltonians are hard at work fashioning a real fishing spot. It's located off the new Shirley Highway near Springfield on property owned by the Northern Virginia Construction Co.

When completed, the public will be able to enjoy the facilities of a well-stocked 8-acre pond.

Reporting on the progress to date, Chapter President Ed Cunningham said, "We've already raised the water level and, with the help of a bulldozer, have cleaned out about 50 per cent of the brush around the lake.

"There's lots to be done, including pulling out some sunken trees in the middle of the water. Our members are pitching in cheerfully, though, and we should be able to start stocking this fall."

Cunningham, who's with the Public Health Service, spoke highly of the help and cooperation of the construction company. In fact, the boys are going to christen the place Hawk Lake in honor of General Superintendent Hawkins.

A lot of credit is due the entire chapter for its unselfish effort. By the time the boys are finished they'll have put more than $200 and untold man hours in a pond that will provide a lot of fun for a lot of people.

Some of the key men on the gratis job are Jay Reed of the Alexandria Sport Shop, George Calder, 100 E. Braddock rd.; La Verne Luh, 79 Chinquapin Village, and Terry A. Nichols, Mount Vernon blvd.

MISCELLANY — The wet weather that has put a damper on fishing hasn't been local only by any means. Even in California they've been screaming about steady rains . . . Dubious prize, though, goes to LaVerne Luh (see above) and companion Portland Roberts, of Old Mount Vernon rd., Alexandria . . . The boys went all the way to Algonquin Park in northern Ontario for some trout fishing only to encounter rain and high water . . . A scientific survey in Michigan showed that brown trout are the most difficult to catch . . . The brook trout is only slightly more cooperative and the rainbow was least difficult, it stated.

TODAY'S TIP—Rockfish are plentiful in Smith's Creek near Point Lookout. Our secret agent took 29 trolling in shallow water with artificial lures.

In a recent report released by the Chairman of the 80-man World Trade Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, constructive criticism was expressed regarding Washington's (1) foreign banking facilities, (2) freight forwarding, (3) difficulties in securing marine insurance, (4) lack of foreign consular services, (5) air transport, (6) difficulty in obtaining world trade information.

Lewis Tells Owners New Contract Price

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis, hinting at a new strike, told soft coal operators yesterday that if they want a contract they must first guarantee welfare aid for distressed miners.

The United Mine Workers chief assailed the operators as "fat cats" and said:

"We assume that you would deplore any impairment of your abnormal income after July 1. (The date when the present contract expires.) Such an assumption would seem to be a logical predicate for the making of a new wage agreement before that date."

Lewis made his remarks during contract negotiations which had been ordered by a Federal court.

Yesterday's talks lasted for two hours and got nowhere. They were recessed until 1 p. m. EST today, after Lewis called for the assuming of nearly 20 million dollars in "moral obligations" to distressed miners. He named that "as a condition precedent to a new contract."

Fund Almost Exhausted

The commitments to pay the 20 million dollars were in welfare provisions made by the trustees of the 1946 welfare and retirement fund, which is now nearly exhausted. That fund was established when the Government was operating the coal pits.

The mines were turned back to the owners July 1, 1947, and a new welfare fund was set up with different trustees. The fund amounts to about 50 million dollars but nothing has been spent because of the fight between Lewis an Ezra Van Horn, operator trustee, over pensions for miners.

Charles A. O'Neill, speaking for the operators, told reporters that Lewis' demand "stopped any progress in the conference."

"The fact that the 1946 fund soon will be out of money has nothing to do with the contract," O'Neill said. "We refuse to make this a precedent to a new contract."

Very Far Apart

He added, however, "I hope we're not deadlocked, but we certainly are far apart."

As for wages, Lewis said the union had no proposals at present, but "assuredly the mine workers expect improvements."

"You and your industry are magnificently opulent," he said, "the most corpulent of our native fat cats."

He also assailed the Taft-Hartley law under which Federal Justice T. Alan Goldsborough forced him to include the Southern Coal Operators Association in the industry-wide bargaining.

Only Through Duress

Couched in his most florid style, his statement to the operators said:

"We attend this conference only through duress. The intemperate judicial sanctions imposed upon us were uttered upon the premise of an oppressive and iniquitous statute. This statute constitutes the first major thrust of Fascist tyranny in the republic.

"As representatives of labor we sit here under attainder; in reverse, your limbs are unshackled. You have no fear of the thought police, and when annoyed by our conduct, you can at will invoke additional processes of government to dragoon us. Free collective bargaining? You have reduced the words to mockery. . . .

"You are digging deep and without restraint into the national purse. From time to time you raise outcries against the men who mine your coal; and while the gullible public is bewildered by your outcries, you pluck more doubloons from the consumers of coal."

Plaza Wins Election In Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, June 7 (U.P.).—Unexpected strong support in remote districts for the presidential candidacy of Manuel Elicio Flor cast doubt tonight on the victory of Galo Plaza, already proclaimed President-elect.

Plaza Lasso

The supreme electoral tribunal on the basis of nearly complete returns, today announced the victory of Plaza with 97,190 votes against 94,932 for Conservative Candidate Flor and 46,781 for Gen. Alberto Enriquez, nominee of a Socialist-Liberal coalition.

Officials of the tribunal said that the vote of the scattered districts not yet reporting would not be sufficient to affect the outcome of the election.

Late today, however, reports of heavy victories for Flor in outlying precincts began to reach Quito and Guayaquil, creating doubt as to Plaza's prospects. The latest official returns still showed Plaza leading.

Dr. Abel Gilbert, vice presidential candidate on the Plaza ticket, had also been declared victor.

Bank Teller Indicted in Alexandria

A teller in Alexandria's First National Bank was indicted by a Federal grand jury yesterday on a charge of embezzling $999.01.

United States Attorney George Humrickhouse said the teller, identified only as Earl C. Mueller, turned himself in on advice of his minister. The money Humrickhouse said had been paid back to the bank. The First National Bank is the one from which a former janitor, David Briggs, stole $27,000 last June.

The grand jury, sitting in Alexandria Division of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, indicted 23 others.

Soldier Parachutes To See Baby, Misses

Little Rock, Ark., June 7 (AP).—A hitching-hiking Army corporal, packing an opened parachute, told police today he had bailed out of an Army transport in an effort to reach home to see his newborn child.

The corporal said he had intended to jump over Oklahoma, but miscalculated, and landed near Memphis, Tenn.

The soldier, Lee Orange of Arnadako, Ohla., was turned over to Army authorities at Hot Springs. He had been denied a furlough to see his new offspring.

NLRB Rules Locals Must Disavow Reds

The National Labor Relations Board decided yesterday that a national union cannot "front" for one of its local unions which has not signed non-Communist affidavits.

The ruling was handed down in a case involving the CIO-Oil Workers and its Local 128, at the Lane Wells Co., Los Angeles.

The board dismissed a petition of the international union to be named as the bargaining agent for 52 Lane Wells employees.

The Taft-Hartley Act requires that in order to use the machinery of the NLRB, officers of a labor union must submit affidavits disvowing Communism.

The national officers of the oil workers have complied, but the leaders of local 128, for reasons not explained by the board, have not signed.

Welfare, Pension Plan Bargaining Ban Is Requested

Two witnesses yesterday urged Congress to ban employer-union bargaining on employe pension and retirement programs.

A. W. Ford, director of industrial relations for the California Packing Corp., told the Joint Committee on Labor Management Relations that his firm now deals with 38 different unions.

"It is clear to me that collective bargaining with our several labor organizations on our pension plan is in itself completely impractical and unsound," he declared.

Theodore R. Iserman, New York labor attorney and consultant, said if the National Labor Relations Board "pursues its present course" in holding that employers must bargain on welfare plans a "fruitful source" of labor disputes will be opened up.

"Probably no other subject of collective bargaining," he said, "offers as many possible points of disagreement as we can find in negotiating welfare plans."

Girl Flies To Arms Of Want-Ad Romeo

Daytona Beach, Fla., June 7 (U.P.).—Blonde Dorothy Lawlor arrived by plane today and fell into the arms of her want-ad Romeo, dapper Dan Wicker.

She was so excited she forgot to ask him about the $13,000 check that was supposed to be the first order of business.

"Shes' a beautiful child," were Wicker's first words after he responded to the vigorous embrace of the woman he'd never seen before.

"He's swell, better than I thought," said Mrs. Lawlor breathlessly.

Wicker made it clear that a week of "getting acquainted" will precede any nuptials.

Taft Promises Fast Action on U. S. and D. C. Pay Increases

Senate Republican policymakers yesterday decided to support a bill to raise the salaries of 1,300,000 Federal and District employes.

Senator Taft of Ohio, the GOP leader, promised to get action on the bill this week. He has ordered his staff to draw up amendments to the Langer-Flanders-Baldwin bill now on the Senate calender that would provide:

1. A flat $400 increase to each of the 475,000 postal employes;

2. A flat raise of $360 to each of the 825,000 Federal and District Government workers whose salaries are fixed by the Classification Act;

3. The Classification Act would also be overhauled to get a better relation between salaries and grades. In making these adjustments, the average salary of the Classification Act employe would be lifted about $100 in addition to the proposed $360 flat increase. However, many employes would not get the average increase, others would get more than $100;

4. The $10,000 ceiling on Classification Act salaries would be lifted to $15,000 for a few specialists, and,

5. The salaries of Cabinet members and other Federal officials would be raised an average of about $5000 each.

Bill's Figures Higher

The Langer-Flanders-Baldwin bill which was reported out of the Senate Civil Service Committee would give postal employes a flat $800 raise, and Classification Act employes would get a flat $550 plus the average increase of $100 through Classification Act revision under it.

The strategy is to call up that bill and to offer the substitute amendments which are now being prepared. The proposed amendments are slated to be presented to the GOP Senate policymakers at a luncheon meeting today. It's entirely possible that minor changes may be agreed on at this meeting.

One things seems sure—that the Senate leaders will not agree to a pay bill for postal employes only. Half a dozen Senators yesterday described as "ridiculous and inconceivable" a report that only postal employes would get an increase. However, several GOP House leaders would like to limit pay raises to this group.

Majority Seen for It

There were conflicting reports on the attitude of House leaders toward the Taft compromise pay plan, but it seems safe to say that a majority will support it.

The big danger of no pay bill now is the possibility of a time-consuming dispute—a dispute in either the House or the Senate over amounts of the increases, or a controversy between the House and the Senate over what should be in the pay measure.

It's no secret that the GOP high command is determined to keep the cost of the bill around the 500-million-dollar figure. If either the House or the Senate should insist, say, on a more costly increase the legislation will be abandoned. In other words, the Taft compromise pay plan is a this-or-nothing bill. Only 11 work days remain before Congress adjourns and each bill considered must take up the minimum of time.

CENSUS Director J. C. Capt may resign soon. But he wants to transfer to another job in the Commerce Department in New York. He's being considered to be chief of the Commerce field office in New York.

FCC: Two more attorneys in the Federal Communications Commission have resigned to enter private law practice here. They are Theodore Baron and Bernard Koteen . . . ARCHIVES: Robert H. Bahmer yesterday was appointed assistant archivist of National Archives. He has been chief of the departmental records branch of the Army's Adjustant General's Office.

VA Administrator Carl Gray is making a two-month inspection trip of all offices and hospitals of the Veterans' Administration above the Mason-Dixon line and in the West. He'll survey his Southern offices this fall.

Gray is reported to have promised congressional leaders that he'll make up his mind whether VA's branch and other offices should be abolished or merged after his first-hand survey. He'll also closely inspect VA's personnel policies and practices in the field.

Meantime, the House Appropriations Committee is ready to report out a budget for VA Atomic Energy, and the Maritime Commission. No sizable VA personnel cut is anticipated.

FCIC: John N. Norton, a former House member from Nebraska, is the first employe to be retired from the Federal Group Insurance Corporation. He had been a special adviser to FGIC for the past several years. Norton is the holder of several other "firsts." He sponsored the first bill offered in the Nebraska Legislature 35 years ago for a unicameral Legislature, and in 1937 he served as a member of Nebraska's first unicameral body.

BOUQUET: Ken Sprankle is a hard-working staff member of the House Appropriations Committee. In a House speech, Representative Thomas (D., Tex.) had this to say about him: "The Government is lucky to have a man of his high caliber, his industry, and his good judgment."

Incidentally, all staff members of both the House and Senate Appropriations Committee are working 12 and 15 hours a day. If overtime were paid, they'd get fat checks.

House Action On District Sales Tax Due Today

Dirksen to Press For Approval Now In Anticipation of Salary Increases

The special House District day for the sales-income tax bill and other local measures was postponed yesterday due to the death of Representative Thomas L. Owens (R., Ill.)

House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) said he would press to have the House approve use of the new levy in the next fiscal year in the belief there will be a general pay increase which would make the new source of revenue immediately necessary for the District.

Dirksen said he was convinced there would be a pay boost for both the postal and classified Government workers, including District employes. He said he did not believe Congress would approve a pay increase for postal workers alone—to do so would open Congress to the charge of "discrimination."

In another decision, the House District Committee in an executive session approved Dirksen's bill for a new liquor price-fixing law in the District. Dirksen presented the bill to the House with a report saying the measure is designed "to stop cut-rate advertising of liquor by providing that a contract to sell liquor may have a minimum price, and when filed with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is enforceable."

Meanwhile, District leaders said that loss of the one day in the rush toward a June 19 adjournment had further dimmed the chances for completing action on the Auchincloss bill for District reorganization and home rule.

Sponsors of the bill were reported near a decision to give up further effort to find a day for completing work on the bill which was left as unfinished House business after two favorable test votes for the measure.

Wide Variety

Ideal Dad Competition Grows Keen

Competition is getting keener in The Washington Post's contest to find the "ideal father" in the Washington area.

The Post has been deluged with nominations for the nicest pop in town. Wives and children have recommended dads who have from 1 to 11 offspring, stand from 5 to 6 feet 1 inch in their stocking feet and range in appearance from "tall and good looking" to "just a little guy."

To enter the contest, write The Post a letter today explaining why you think your father deserves a prize.

Harold Mesirow of 3544 Appleton st. nw., thinks his father, Albert Mesirow, is "not only the best father in Washington, but the best one anywhere."

Harold's father, who owns Parchey's Restaurant, has built a "neat basketball court in back of the house and enjoys playing with his son. The family takes a lot of trips together, and father is never too busy to give his 15-year-old son a hand with school work."

Mary Hunter gives her dad a vote because he's always making his wife and children feel like an angel. He is Charles Hunter of 153 Galveston pl. sw., a janitor for Dreyfuss Bros., 1019 15th st. nw.

Robert Lowe, who is 11, too, thinks his dad is tops because "he takes me to ball games and buys the things I want if it is reasonable." Robert's ideal father is Earl N. Lowe, of 10113 Dallas ave., Silver Spring, a mechanic for the Hendrick Novelty Co.

Contest deadline is June 16. The winning father will be announced in The Washington Post June 19, and treated to dinner and a show with his family on Father's Day.

D. C. 'Indians' Give Senators Tea-Bag Party As Protest Against Sales Tax Legislation

TEA PARTY—1948 VERSION—Washington area AVC members, bent on beating District sales tax legislation on grounds it means "taxation without representation," demonstrate how they'd have whooped it up inside the Senate Office Building if they'd been permitted. Instead, they took off their Indian headdresses and peacefully buttonholed Senators, leaving with each two tea bags—reminders of the Boston Tea Party—and a statement of their position on the sales tax and the home rule bill. The "chief" in the foreground is Maynard DeWitt, chairman of the civic affairs committee of the Greater Washington Area Council of AVC

A band of Washington "Indians," wearing feathered headgear and grim expressions, whooped their way into the Senate Office Building yesterday—bent on killing sales tax legislation.

The delegation of 10—members of the American Veterans Committee here—brandished dozens of tea bags, a reminder of the Boston "party" of December, 1773, and small cards which read:

"Dear Senator—Taxation without representation is tyranny. We want home rule for the District of Columbia. We want the people of Washington to be able to decide their own taxes."

The "chief," Maynard DeWitt, who wore a tight-fitting Indian-style jacket and his own tweed trousers—the borrowed one didn't fit—explained that "this is a joint venture, highlighting the AVC's drive for home rule in Washington and our opposition to the sales tax." DeWitt is chairman of the civic affairs committee of AVC's Greater Washington Area Council.

The "Indians," who gathered on the steps of the Senate Office Bldg. amid war-whoops and yelps, pinned on makeshift headdresses—chicken feathers tacked to brown, grocery-style paper. Then they trooped inside, only to get a stop signal from a Capitol guard.

But the controversy was soon cleared up, and the group, minus feathers, pledged to see "individual" Senators marched in.

DeWitt announced later that the delegates "passed out about 80 tea bags and cards and received "encouragement" from several Senators.

Wife Unhurt In 52-Foot River Plunge

A 36-year-old Washington housewife yesterday plunged 52 feet to the Anacostia River off Sousa Bridge and walked unaided after she was rescued.

Witnesses on the bridge said the sound of her body striking the water came back at them "like a pistol shot."

She was pulled aboard a construction company tugboat by a workman, Miles Spiney, of 1620 C st. ne. Examined later at Gallinger Hospital, she was reported physically unharmed by her experience, but was detained for mental observation.

Police identified her as Mrs. Margaret Ware, of 3220 12th st. se., wife of a painter and mother of two children.

They said she told them she jumped after a motorist stopped beside her, asked her if she had a match, then asked her if she wanted a ride and drove off. Even though the motorist drove off without harming her, police said she told them:

"I just had to get away from him. I don't know why."

Seeing her leap, but too far away to intercede, were Sergt. James E. Presley, Corpl. Leonard Forte and Pfc. William J. Doss, all of Andrews Field, Md., Army Air Force base.

7 From District Get Region Posts In Aid Agency

Seven Washington residents have been elected to posts in the Middle Atlantic Region of the Joint Distribution Committee, American agency aiding distressed persons abroad.

Named vice chairman, it was announced yesterday, were Edmund I. Kaufmann, 2400 16th st. nw., businessman, and Milton W. King, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., attorney.

Elected to the executive committee were Morris Cafritz, Joseph Cherner, Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, Isidore Hershfield and Mrs. Nat H. Levy.

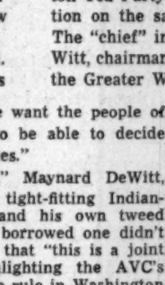
Brush With Law

Psychologist Again Faces Dog Trouble

A psychologist who advises on personality adjustments had his second brush with the law yesterday over his household pet, a 2-year-old German police dog named Rex.



Dr. Macvaugh

In Bethesda Police Court, the psychologist, Gilbert S. Macvaugh, 4502 Stanford st., Chevy Chase, Md., was charged with maintaining a nuisance because Rex, it was claimed, had bitten neighborhood children.

Macvaugh last fall had a brush with the law at Ocean City, N. J., where a court convicted him of hitting his father, Allen Macvaugh, in an argument over the pet.

Police said Macvaugh was taken back to Ocean City on a fugitive warrant served by Montgomery County police, fined $50 and given a 364 day s suspended jail sentence by the Ocean City court.

Yesterday's charge was brought by Coast Guard Comdr. Charles B. Arrington, 4500 Stanford st., Chevy Chase, next door to Macvaugh. Arrington said Rex bit his son, Charles, jr., 13, on May 27 "until the blood ran."

Similar biting charges were made also by Lieut. Col. John M. Virden, 6619 East ave., on behalf of his son, Mike, 12; and Frank P. Mulgannon, 4406 Stanford st., on behalf of his son, Donald, 14. Virden said the dog bit his son six times.

Macvaugh acted as his own counsel. While the charges were being aired before Judge Warren Browning, Macvaugh's son, Gilbert, jr., held Rex on a leash. The unusually large dog slept quietly on the floor.

The psychologist, who recently concluded a series of radio programs entitled, "Should They Marry?" over WOL, argued the bitings were "all in a spirit of play, not in a spirit of viciousness."

After a promise from Macvaugh he would keep the dog confined and muzzled at all times, Judge Browning continued the case two weeks.

"If you gentlemen come back and tell me you're satisfied, I'll dismiss the case."

2 Dead, 2 Ill After Drinking Spiked Wine

Two men were dead yesterday and two others may die as result of a weekend drinking party at the District Home for the Aged and Infirm, at Blue Plains, police disclosed yesterday.

The living told police they drank "smoke" which they said they made by mixing denatured alcohol with wine.

Dead were William Schultz, 78, and Daniel Ferris, 70. Schultz was found wandering about the grounds at 7 a. m., Sunday. He died at 3 p. m., Ferris died at 5:30 p. m., Sunday, two hours after he was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

In critical condititon last night at Gallinger Hospital was John Higgins, 71. The condition of the fourth man, Charles Chappelle, 60, was reported still undetermined last night at the hospital. All were residents at the home.

Herbert Thorne, assistant superintendent at the home, declared it was "not unusual" for charges there to bring back cheap liquor and share it with their friends. He said the home lacks sufficient personnel to search every resident returning from visits outside.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, performed autopsies on the two dead men yesterday but withheld issuance of death certificates pending reports of chemical analyses.

Cubbage Cleared Of Manslaughter In Child's Death

Walter R. Cubbage, 31, of Plum Point, Md., dealer for the Evening Star, was acquitted yesterday by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie in Upper Marlboro Police Court of manslaughter charges growing out of the traffic death of a 5-year-old child.

The judge, however, imposed a fine of $100 for reckless driving, which Cubbage appealed.

Cubbage was charged as the operator of a truck which struck Carol Rae Scarborough, 5, of 3 Chelsea dr., Upper Marlboro, May 28. The child died three hours later in Providence Hospital in Washington.

Judge Bowie ruled insufficient negligence was involved to warrant manslaughter, but that the driver should have slowed down when he saw the child at the side of the road.

Montgomery Tax Hike Is Opposed

Informal Poll Of Commissioners Show All Against Increase in Rate

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A proposed 5-cent increase in Montgomery County's tax rate has little chance of being adopted, an informal poll of the fiive county commissioners showed yesterday.

The five officials who are charged with setting the tax rate for the 1948-49 budget to be adopted prior to July 1, all expressed opposition to a tax increase.

Expressing unanimous belief that "taxes are already high enough," the commissioners cited increased revenues expected from the recently completed reassessment of county real estate.

In disclosing he will vote against proposed tax hike, President Brooke Johns of the board, advocated enactment of legislation which will provide revenue from a greater proportion of county residents.

"The property owners have been carrying the county for years," Johns said, "and taxes should be distributed more evenly to include residents who do not own property but use county services."

County Commissioners Wesley I. Sauter and George (Ace) Esworthy said positively they will vote against the 5-cent tax increase, which was proposed by County Supervisor I. G. McNayr.

Commissioner Charles H. Jamison said "as things stand now, I am going to vote against the increase."

The fifth commissioner, Oliver W. Youngblood, said he would like to see the present rate of $1.80 per assessed $100 valuation "stay where it is."

Both Youngblood and Jamison said they are opposed to police and teacher salary increases which have been requested by school and police officials.

Johns Won't Seek Board Reelection

President Brooke Johns of Montgomery County commissioners, announced yesterday he will not seek reelection as a county board member.

Elected in 1946, Johns' term would normally run until 1950 but if the proposed Montgomery County charter is approved in the November 2 election, he would be out of a job.

Johns cited the "headaches" connected with the job as his reason for not wanting another term. He has made no secret of the fact he would like to run for Congress but has stated he will not oppose his "friend," Representative J. Glenn Beall, the incumbent who is seeking reelection.

Clair Requests Name on Ballot For County Board

Arlington County Republican Francis J. Clair, who seeks the GOP nomination for the county board, yesterday said he had mailed notice to County GOP Chairman Edgar W. Pumphrey requesting that Clair's name be placed on the ballot "in the August primaries."

Pumphrey, who has been accused by Clair of making a "deal" to back an independent county board candidate this fall, denied on Friday that a Republican Party primary had been scheduled for August.

Clair also revealed yesterday that he had sent a copy of the notice to N. L. Davis, secretary of the State board of elections in Richmond.

Besides Republican Clair, a free-lance writer, three Democrats are candidates for the one vacant board seat. They are Incumbent Board Member Alfred Frisbie, Harold L. Schilz, attorney, and William Nemeth, insurance agent.

$150 Is Forfeited On Numbers Count

Charged with possession of numbers slips, James Williams of 1029 New Jersey ave. nw., forfeited $150 collateral yesterday when he failed to appear in Prince Georges County Police Court at Upper Marlboro.

Williams also forfeited $50 collateral on a charge of reckless driving. Both charges grew out of an automobile accident April 28 on the Marlboro pike. At that time, police said, he threw a pile of numbers slips into the bushes along the highway.

In Chevy Chase, Md.

3 Injured as Train Pushes Car 597 Feet

Three men were injured, none seriously, when their auto collided with a 21-car Baltimore and Ohio freight train and was pushed 597 feet at Jones Bridge Road intersection in Chevy Chase, Md., at 3:40 p. m. yesterday.

Lieut. Charles T. Barnes of Montgomery County police at Bethesda said an inquiry would be held today at 2 p. m. at the Bethesda Police station.

The injured were: Fred L. Smith, 28, the driver, of Walkerville, Md., lacerations; Ralph B. Smith, 58, father of driver, of Walkerville, Md., fractured ribs; Clarence Huffer, 65, of Frederick, Md., concussion.

Says He Blew Whistle

The engineer of the freight train, laden with steel and cement and traveling at 8-10 miles an hour, was R. M. Carrell, 48, of Branchville, Md.

Carrell told police he blew the caboose whistle as the train swung around a tree and hedge lined curve about 200 feet from the intersection.

"I slapped on the emergency brake when I saw the car—but it was too late," police quoted him as saying.

Attendants at Suburban Hospital reported that Fred Smith said he saw the train coming but that his car skidded on the rain-slicked tracks.

Lieutenant Barnes said the caboose rammed the right front and rear doors and the lower part of the right hood of the car. The caboose's coupling pierced the side of the car, pushing it 597 feet.

No Lights or Signals

There are no lights or signals other than a railroad crossing sign at the intersection adjacent to Rock Creek Knolls housing development, about 3 city blocks north of the East-West Highway.

The damage to the caboose was negligible. The spur-line train which was en route to Georgetown junction from the B. & O. northeast freight yards was tied up about an hour.

Those who have been summoned to appear at the inquiry include S. R. Neal, 3323 Holmead pl. nw., flagman on the train; Frank Lake, 2727 Lorcom Lane, Arlington, conductor; S. S. White 2122 4th st. ne., yardmaster and Carrell.

Lake was conductor on a freight train on the same line which struck a Congressional Country Club bus, killing three passengers in May, 1947. That accident occurred at the Dorset st. crossing in Kenwood, about four miles west of the scene of yesterday's collision.

Driver Hurt

Stolen Car Hits Pole, Youth Dies

Deaths this date last year.. 31

A 20-year-old Fairmount Heights (Md.) youth was fatally injured early yesterday in a crash which ended an attempt to elude police in a stolen car.

Cecil Neal, 702 60th pl., was pronounced dead on arrival at Gallinger Hospital only a few minutes after the car in which he was riding crashed against a power pole on Bennings rd. near the Kingman Lake Bridge at 3 a. m.

Critically injured was Isaac S. Marshall, 18, of 611 62d ave., Fairmount Heights, who police identified as the driver of the car. He was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with compound fractures of both legs and multiple cuts and bruises, and was under police guard last night pending action of a coroner's jury.

According to police, the crash occurred only a few minutes after the car eluded a First Precinct scout car at 3d and H sts. nw. Occupants of the police car said they became suspicious of the driver's actions and made a U-turn in an attempt to give chase, but lost the other car immediately.

It was not until after the accident that police learned the death car had been stolen during the night from James O. McKenzie, 401 Eastern ave.

Before crashing against the pole on Bennings rd. the auto occupied by the two youths knocked over a stop sign and glanced off a drinking fountain, police said.

The force of the impact drove the motor and instrument panel into the laps of the occupants. Rescue squad workers had to use jacks to remove the victims from the wreckage.

Truman Signs District Armory Control Bill

President Truman has signed the new District Armory control bill, the White House announced yesterday.

The new law places control over non-military activities at the armory in the hands of a three-member board representing the District Commissioners, the National Guard, and with a third member employed by neither the Federal nor District governments to be selected by chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees.

Congress worked out the compromise plan to settle a long-standing feud between National Guard and District officials over armory control.

Milk Price Hike Seen After Boost In Pay Here

Dairy Heads Won't Speculate on Extent But Agree Increase To Be Necessary

A boost in milk prices here is expected soon as a result of the wage raise given dairy workers, several industry officials indicated yesterday.

While none of the dairy leaders would speculate on the extent of the increase, they pointed out that early in the wage negotiations with their employes, several dairies said that any substantial increase would have to be passed on to consumers.

Sunday night the Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Local 246 (AFL), which claims 1500 members, agreed to terms of a new contract with nine Greater Washington dairies which supply more than 80 per cent of the area's milk.

Outline of Accord

Three hours before a threatened midnight strike deadline, the union voted to accept a $5 a week raise for hourly workers and a $4 increase in the weekly minimum income guaranteed to wholesale and retail routemen. The contract also will provide a $5 weekly increase for route foremen and vacation relief men, it was announced.

Details of this agreement were being worked out in final form yesterday. Herman A. Schulteis, vice president of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, said the final contract should be ready for signatures today.

Asked about the predicted milk price boost, he said, "I haven't the slightest idea of what the price will be. First we have to analyze the contract and determine how it affects our costs. Each dairy will have to make its individual decision."

Other dairy officials said they did not see how the present price can be maintained. Michael H. Burchell, president of Alexandria Dairy Products Co., said, "I feel certain that there will have to be an increase."

Burchell added, "It is possible that we may petition the Virginia Milk Commission on this question, and that takes 10 days or more for a hearing."

While the commission sets minimum prices only, Burchell said a hearing "would be the best way to handle it." Virginia prices are the only ones in the area that are controlled, and these prices in the past have set the area pattern.

Last month, District Court Justice Richmond B. Keech dismissed an antitrust price-fixing indictment against seven area dairies, the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, and the association's secretary treasurer. The Justice Department has appealed this decision to the Supreme Court.

Eight Days Left For Virginia Auto Inspection

Nearby Virginia motorists were warned yesterday they have only eight more days in which to have their autos inspected in time to meet a State-wide June 15 deadline.

Col. C. W. Woodson, jr., superintendent of State police, emphasized there will be no extension of the deadline as was the case last year, when the inspection carried over into August because garages reported a scarcity of needed replacement parts. He said police throughout the State would be alerted for Virginia autos which do not carry the new gold windshield sticker after June 15.

In Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties, 75 garages and service stations have been designated as official inspection agencies. Motorists who have not applied for the inspection were urged to do so immediately to avert a last-minute jamming of stations.

Nerves, Tension, the Uncertainty of Everything Today

Man Ends Life After Happy Family Picnic

By John London
Post Reporter

Neighbors were stunned as the baffling news swept down the unit block of Bates st. nw.

They all knew Walter D. Smith. He'd grown up on this modest street, lined with its rows of uniform brick dwellings.

Only 28, he had a steady job, was a likable fellow, a model family man, a perfect neighbor.

How then the way things turned out?

They had all heard how Walter, his wife, 2-year-old son and sister spent Sunday enjoying a family picnic at Breezy Point, Md. After the family returned, the sister went home. Walter and his wife puttered in the garden, played with young David.

Later, Walter asked his wife, Elizabeth, 25, to get some bread, and the Sunday comics at the grocery up the street. Returning home to tell him the store had no comic papers left, she suddenly screamed.

Walter was dead. He'd shot himself with a .16-gauge shotgun he bought last November for deer hunting. The shot went through the bridge of his nose. The coroner said it was suicide.

The uneventful routine of the quiet street was shattered. Strange cars and taxis drove up, police and reporters arrived.

Housewives stood on the black iron stoops and whispered softly. One neighbor thought she had the answer.

Nerves, tension, the uncertainty of everything today—those were the enemies that pulled the trigger, she suggested, and others nodded.

Smith, a Navy veteran, had been treated at Mount Alto for stomach disorders, general nervousness, police said.

Mrs. Mary Thompson, of 36-A Bates st., next door to the Smiths at 34-A, thought she had some insight.

"Sometimes Walter would talk to me and my husband about the trouble," she said. "Nerves, you feel your insides are being wrenched out, headaches, you can't sleep."

"It goes on and on and doctors don't seem to be able to help," she added, tensely. "I know, I have the same trouble."

Smith, a machinist at the David Taylor Model Basin, left no notes. He would have been 27 on June 29.

Sudden Thunderstorm Fells Trees, Snarls Wires and Drops Temperature From 80 to 69

The Washington Post

A victim of yesterday's wind in front of 635 D st. se.

Thick sheets of sudden rain cascaded down on the District for nearly an hour yesterday afternoon, sending police and firemen on numerous fallen tree and wire complaints and creating havoc in general.

When it was over, the Weather Bureau calmly announced a mere .21 of an inch had fallen. There was another spurt of rain last night.

The afternoon thunderstorm, which drove thousands to shelter in downtown Washington, was accompanied by lightning and gusts of wind up to 27 miles an hour. A temperature of around 80 degrees at 2:20 p. m., when the storm began, dropping to 69 during the rain. The high yesterday was 81 at 1:30 p. m.

After scoring yesterday with his prediction of thunderstorms, the weatherman came up with "some chance" for more of the same this afternoon.

He also said today would be partly cloudy and warm, with a high temperature of 80.

Most rain yesterday in this area fell at National Airport, which gauged .93 of an inch. The observer there said he clocked "two or three short gusts of wind up to 50 miles an hour." The rain shut down aircraft movement for only a few minutes, however.

In the District, firemen obligingly removed a 12-inch tree from the top of an auto in front of 1308 6th st. sw. Roof of the auto, which belongs to Robert Carter, 1312 6th st. sw., was punctured. Another tree in the 600 block of D st. se.

At Parkfairfax, lightning knocked a hole 4 by 8 feet in side of a brick apartment at 3232 Martha Custis dr. and ripped an 8-foot-long gash in the brick siding of another apartment at 3208 Martha Curtis dr. No one was present in either apartment at the time.

Tree crews of National Capital Parks were sent out to a fallen tree on the Smithsonian Institution grounds. Park police reported "small limbs" were down on Hains Point.

While the Potomac Electric Power Co. reported "no extensive damage," police responded to several "live wire" calls over the city.

The maintenance section of the D. C. Sanitation Department's sewer division received no complaints of flooded basements. More than 20 citizens did call, however, to report flooded sewer catch basins.

SENATE WIVES MEET AT LUNCH: Mrs. Homer E. Capehart, right, clasps the hand of Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg as the latter arrived for luncheon in the Chinese Room at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. Mrs. John L. McClellan, center, was cohostess with Mrs. Capehart

Mrs. McClellan, Mrs. Capehart Entertain at Luncheon

LARGE BOUQUETS of old-fashioned garden flowers decorated the long oval table in the Chinese Room at the Mayflower yesterday for the luncheon given by Mrs. John L. McClellan, wife of the Senator from Arkansas and Mrs. Homer E. Capehart, wife of the Senator from Indiana.

Some of the colorful blossoms were from Mrs. McClellan's own garden and they filled two high vases at either end of the table. In the center was a tall, silver filigree vase with spreading branches, around which were strung garlands of pink rambler roses.

Covers were laid for 70 guests and at each plate were two little favors—a tiny china ashtray, made in Arkansas; and a keyring with leather case attached, just big enough to hold that nickel no one ever has when the time comes to make a telephone call.

The two hostesses, friends of long standing despite the fact that their husbands are in opposite political camps, were entertaining for some of their friends in official and residential circles. Mrs. McClellan wore sheer summer black for the occasion, the skirt ruffled with bands of lace. Her large brimmed black horsehair hat flared prettily, and on the under side was pinned a big pink rose. Mrs. Capehart wore cool green chambray and a white straw hat with a large cluster of white flowers on the brim. A wrist corsage of white and green lillies completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was there, along with the widow of another famous man, Mrs. Carter Glass. Mrs. William O. Douglas was a guest, as were Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg and Mrs. Robert A. Taft. Others in attendance included Mrs. Lester Biffle, Mrs. Wallace White, Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, Mrs. William Fulbright, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. H. Alexander Smith, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mrs. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Kenneth S. Wherry, Mrs. Tom Connally and Mrs. Dennis Chavez.

Mrs. Davis Elkins and Mrs. Fred Britten were guests, as was Mrs. Jennings Randolph. Also there were Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Peter Drury, Mrs. Spessard L. Holland, Mrs. Julian Gillespie, Mrs. Fred Morrison, Mrs. Spencer Love and many more.

Miss Larkin Here

Miss Virginia Larkin, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, has arrived in Washington for the summer holidays. She is a student at Manhattanville College in New York City. Her brother, Lieut. Harry Larkin, who has just spent 27 months overseas in the Philippines and Japan, is due in town today for a vacation. En route to Washington, Lieut. Larkin stopped off in California to see Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas Larkin, jr.

Tea Guests See Invention, New Portraits

Something indestructible for convertibles has been invented. It's a panel of glass of non-breakable composition, adjustable to the back of a convertible in 30 seconds, and removable in the same amount of time. The panel allows the driver unobstructed view out the rear of the car, thus serving the interest of safety driving.

Inventor and holder of patent for "saftisight" is Mrs. McKee Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke. Mrs. Stone invited her friends with convertibles to tea yesterday at the home of her parents in Georgetown, to see the new invention. Frank Fay of "Harvey" fame was there, and found a white rabbit waiting for him on the drawing room sofa.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Du Bose, Mrs. George Thorpe, Baroness von Schoen and Miss Bertha Joseph.

Two new portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Brooke were also on display for the afternoon. They are admirable likenesses, painted by the gifted Bulgarian artist, Tasev, who has been in Washington just two months.

Mrs. MacNeille Becomes Bride Of Mr. Riggs

Mrs. Close MacNeille and Augustus Riggs, 4th, of Baltimore, Md., were married yesterday afternoon at the home of former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies on Klingle Road. Mrs. Riggs is the daughter of Mrs. Davies, and her husband is the son of Mrs. Amelia d'Murguiondo Riggs and Augustus Riggs, 3rd.

Henry B. Close of Cornwall, N. Y., gave his niece in marriage. Regan McKinney was best man, and an old friend of the family, Justice Bennett Champ Clark, officiated.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Mich., and is also descended from the Merriweather family of Virginia and Maryland.

The bridegroom's family has lived in Cooksville, Md., for four generations. Mr. Riggs' grandfather was Uruguayan Minister to the United States. During the war, Mr. Riggs served in the Third Cavalry until it was disbanded, when he transferred to the Quartermaster Corps. He is Master of the Howard County Hounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Riggs will make their home in Woodbine, Md.

Girl Is Horrified by Her Affluent Parents' Violent Reaction When She Puts Her First Paycheck in Bank; They Demand Third of It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My parents are fine, upstanding, church-going people, well liked in the community. Married for 25 years, they've never been addicted to quarrels. They own their own home and have ample means. Hence, their present attitude shocks and horrifies me.

I am a girl, 23, an only child, and they gave me a good education—two years of college, singing lessons, etc.—and I have no doubt they could have had servants and finer clothes if they had been less generous with me, but they didn't care for pretentiousness anyway.

When I received my first paycheck, I put it in my savings account, where they had taught me to put the trivial sums I earned or received in childhood. They reacted quite violently to this, making me feel as if I had done an almost dishonest deed. They'd expected me to bring home my pay and give them one third for room and board.

"Don't you want to feel grown-up and pay your own way after all we've done for you?" mother asked. "What do you think we gave you an education for?" father angrily flung at me. As to that, a child accepts blindly, not realizing he is obligating himself; and I bitterly told father I hadn't asked to be born. He would have struck me if mother hadn't intervened. I wish he had struck me dead!

Should She Yield To Their Demand?

THE WHOLE affair, with mother hysterical and weeping and father raving, sickens and disgusts me. And the prospect of paying room and board in my own home doesn't make me feel "grown-up," because I wouldn't get grown-up privileges in return.

My choice in literature, radio, theater, my comings and goings, my mail, still would be subject to examination and disapproval, as it has always been; not due to distrust, for I've always been an obedient daughter, but because of a morbid interest of mother's (especially) that I remain "close" to her and not keep back any secrets.

They say the money all will be mine some day; as if I were a vulture, just waiting! It never occurred to me to count on them in that grisly fashion. I am able-bodied, in good health, and would much prefer to make my own way.

I imagine I sound dreadfully spoiled, but I can't help feeling that their attitude is all out of proportion, somehow. Should I meekly give in, as I have to all their other demands, and let them dominate? Or should I gradually, not hastily or in anger, break away and seek a life of my own? By age and training I am equipped to make an adequate living for myself, and am an ambitious responsible person. Please advise.

C. P.

Money Is Symbol Of Power to Them

DEAR C. P.: There are certain neurotic authoritarian types who, to feel secure in their human dealings, must arrogate unto themselves top-dog position in every relationship; and with these folk, money becomes a symbol of power or force.

They would hold the purse-strings and keep the person or persons to be subjugated in a financially strapped position, hence incapable (they hope) of establishing free independent functioning of mind, spirit and character.

This attitude is not uncommon among parents toward children; and is, of course, the reverse of constructive devotion, which in every way furthers the wish of the other person to grow and develop.

As Dr. Eric Fromm explains in his book "Man for Himself" (Rinehart & Co.), see page 110, "Love is the productive form of relatedness to others . . . It is the expression of intimacy between two human beings under the condition of the preservation of each other's integrity."

Their Policy Is Irrational

HE FURTHER says, "The exploitative attitude, on the other hand, implies usually a sadistic kind of relationship: If I take by force all I need from the other person, I must rule over him and make him the powerless object of my domination."

Without delving into the dynamics of your parents' irrational authoritarian behavior, one may safely say, at any rate, that their attitude toward you is exploitative and their recent blast sadistic. Your father's rage and your mother's hysteria at your first move toward independence comprise an outburst intended to stymie you with fear and guilt-feelings.

Thus there is a wholesome common sense basis for your answering outrage. Their attitude is, indeed, "all out of proportion" to reason. They aren't interested in your earnings as such; their object is devious control of your life, and that you cannot afford to permit, if you would develop and safeguard normal adult personality health. So, for advice: break out of their clutches as best you can. It will be no easy assignment; but here's wishing you luck in the gallant endeavor. M. H.

Shantungs in Vivid Colors Steal Summer Spotlight

By Peggy Preston

PURE silk shantung in bold, brilliant shades is fashion-right this summer. Deep, rich black sheers are important, too, and for contrast there is spanking white, touched, if you like, with a bit of gold adornment.

Those were the color trends that were noticeable yesterday at the final luncheon fashion show of the season in the Lounge at the Mayflower Hotel.

Costumes were presented by Jelleff's, and ranged from bathing and beach togs to late afternoon frocks. Fred Cole's spectacular swim suits, made with wired bra, and leaving the back quite bare, were shown. And there were tailored playclothes made of a light corduroy that were newsworthy.

Silk shantungs, in a low price range, were hits of the show. Colors included deep, electric blues, rose reds and purples—proof that the old idea that summer clothes must be done in pastel shades has been outmoded, for this season, at any rate.

AMONG the spectators in the Lounge was Princess Tawhida of Cairo, who was having her first glimpse of an American fashion show.

Used to the more elaborate, exaggerated European styles which are shown in Cairo shops, the princess was surprised and interested in the simplicity of American clothes.

"They are more wearable than those we see in Cairo or Paris," she pointed out. "In our shops we see gowns that are so exaggerated in line that only a professional model could do them justice. Here, you show clothes that any woman feels she might look well in."

FASHION SHOW SCHEDULE: Vacation clothes for the Government girl will be shown by Jelleff's Wednesday, June 9, at Arlington Farms Recreation Hall at 8:30 p.m. Popular priced merchandise will be featured.

The regular Friday luncheon-fashion shows at the Shoreham Hotel will be continued without interruption during the summer months . . . The Raleigh Hotel shows close officially on Saturday, June 12, when outstanding members of the class in fashion modeling at Southeastern University will show warm weather wear from Connecticut Avenue shops. Regular shows will open again in the Pall Mall Room after Labor Day.

COOL, noncrushable peek-a-boocle fabric was used in this multi-tiered afternoon frock, its slim-through-the-bodice fit being achieved with the new 12-inch dress placket closure. It will be one of the garments shown today at "Zip Into Summer," the Talon-McCall fabric fashion show held at the Hecht Co. in Silver Spring. Pattern is McCall design No. 7258

Fashioned for Homemakers

THE EXPANDING role of slide fasteners in clothing made at home is being featured in the series of fashion showings yesterday and today at the Hecht Co., Silver Spring.

All garments being shown have been made from McCall patterns and Talon fasteners used throughout. Attention is being called to the different sewing techniques that bring professional results to slide fastener insertions on such "problem" fabrics as peek-a-boocle, terry cloth, saline cloth, and jersanese.

Entitled "Zip Into Summer," the show includes such costumes as a multi-tiered afternoon frock, with 12-inch placket fastener; a fly-front shirtwaist dress with concealed fastener; a black jersanese halter necked swim suit, and terry cloth beach coat, featuring a cotton lined hood that unzips to make a wide shoulder collar.

Delicate Laces Takes Careful Laundering

Put the very delicate lace into a Mason jar partly filled with warm water and reliable soapsuds. Screw the lid on tightly and shake gently for several minutes. Rinse carefully and dry between two towels for a while. Then spread out on one towel in the sun. Pull gently into shape instead of ironing.

Hair Needs Special Care In Summer

Most of us look forward to summer as the time to "let our hair down" and relax. Hair Stylist Lura de Gez sees it as the season when, alas, most of us let our hair down, period—in the sense that we don't do right by it.

As soon as the sun comes out and strong we rush up reserves of creams and ointments to protect our skins, squint-proof our eyes with dark glasses, but expect our crowning glory to stand right out in the sun and take it.

Hair-conditioning, Miss de Gez points out, is just as important to summer comfort as the kind without the "h." This summer we're in luck, because the "small, neat head" look that is fashionable is also the most comfortable and easiest to care for.

So, supposing you have clipped your locks in 1948 fashion, Miss de Gez offers the following suggestions for keeping your hair well groomed with maximum comfort and minimum effort and time:

Brush Faithfully

First, don't neglect brushing and be sure the brush reaches the scalp with each stroke. Even girls who brush their hair faithfully seldom get to the roots, where the lustre must come from. They merely draw the brush through the hair itself. And this, says Miss de Gez, is largely waste effort.

Proper lubrication is essential, with sun and salt water drying the natural oils or the scalp. It is better to rub very small quantities of a lanolin base pomade into the scalp daily than large gobs every now and then.

If you've lubricated the scalp properly and regularly, there's no need to do so just before going in swimming. Better, in fact, to wait until you get out and your hair is rinsed free of salt water. The scalp will absorb the emollient better after the exercise has set up the circulation.

A skilled hair stylist will cut your hair allowing for a "turn." That is, in such a way across the crown of the head that the part may be changed from side to side and the hair "turned" when it begins to bleach out too much in one spot.

The market is flooded with products to help you in your quest of well groomed tresses, but one that is particularly newsworthy just now is a three-way package known as the Robert Curley Preparation. It contains three basic aids; a hair conditioner, made with a 70% lanolin base, which restores brilliance and softness to the hair; a creme shampoo; and a combination comb and brush, made with removable nylon bristles. The latter may be taken apart and washed separately to insure cleanliness. The product is available at Kann's.

At Opening of Annual Convention

WCTU Hits 'War Propaganda', UMT

Approximately 100 delegates to the seventy-fourth annual convention of the District of Columbia Woman's Christian Temperance Union heard a series of speeches yesterday assailing universal military training, the Mundt bill, alcoholic advertising and "war propaganda."

Speaking in opposition to UMT, Miss Elizabeth Smart, national WCTU legislative chairman, declared "the Army shouldn't be entrusted with teen-agers until drinking of all alcohol beverages is ruled out."

Rushing from the Capitol to make her legislative report at the afternoon session of the two-day convention, Miss Smart predicted that "UMT would not pass this session of Congress."

Miss Smart said that the congressional bill to prohibit advertising of alcoholic beverages is now at an impasse. She stated that glamorizing drinking was detrimental to temperance, and that furthermore "alcoholic beverages do not contribute to family happiness, health, social or business success."

Mrs. Alexander Stewart, WCTU member, in an afternoon address before the conclave delegates gathered in Foundry Methodist Church, deplored what she termed "war propaganda in this country."

"We Christian women oppose war," she asserted. "The taxpayers will have to decide whether they want to spend money on military preparedness or for better housing, education and social reforms."

Mrs. Stewart called upon the women of the country to use their power to persuade the Government to strengthen U. N. and to quit by-passing the U. N. as she said it did in the Greek situation. "I told President Truman," she declared, "that economic aid should be given to the Europeans on the basis of human need and not for the purpose of conducting war against Russia."

Referring to the Mundt bill pending in Congress, she asserted, "The Mundt bill is dangerous to groups like ours. If it passes, the WCTU would be thought controlled."

Mrs. Caroline E. Coates, president of the District WCTU, who was featured speaker following a dinner last night, suggested a three-point program to win "The Battle for Peace."

Her program dealt with economics as related to trade and cartels; the interracial problem, and the need for spiritual reawakening so as to revive common decency among all peoples and nations.

Mrs. Coates advocated the abolition of international cartels and increased reciprocal trade among the nations of the world.

If a world council were formed now, Mrs. Coates said, it would include 500 million Orientals and 500 million Africans. Many of these brown, yellow and black races have not approached our level of literacy, she said, yet they would be able to outvote the Anglo-Saxon peoples in any world government. She suggested sending American educators to Africa and the Orient to raise the literacy levels in those areas.

The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, minister of Foundry Methodist Church, gave the welcoming address at the morning assembly. He congratulated the women on the part they are playing to promote temperance.

A memorial hour under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Bixler, was held for WCTU members who died in the past year.

New officers will be elected this morning. The convention will close tonight following an address on universal military training by Col. Walter Burns (ret.).

Protocol Boys Sample Weizmann Wit; Jayhawker Returns to Native Eyrie

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WHEN HEADS OF STATE are dined officially at the White House, the State Department's protocol boys check the menu solicitously to see that no national or racial dietary tabu is violated. For instance, Mohammedans eat no pig meat, supposedly down no alcohol. Some years ago, when the berobed princes of Saudi Arabia first bobbed up, the late George T. Summerlin, then chief of protocol, pruned pork in all forms from the menu, but, in the interests of cheerful conversation, slipped in an inconspicuously pale, yet stimulating white wine (which the princes sipped appreciatively).

So, when Dr. Chaim Weizmann, head of the newly made state of Israel, was to be entertained at the White House, the State Department nearly knocked itself out making sure everything was hotsy-totsy. In planning the state dinner the most delicately complicated problem was whether Dr. Weizmann adhered strictly to kosher food rules. For kosher prepared meats and poultry must be slaughtered, drained of blood by a rabbi.

No one knew Dr. Weizmann's predilection, so he was "got to" through an intermediary. Besides being a noted physicist and statesman, the Russian-born, up-to-now British citizen, President of Israel, is exceedingly cosmopolitan, possesses a corrosive wit. His retort on being asked what he wanted to eat, how he wanted it prepared was characteristically incisive.

"I'd like," said Dr. Weizmann, completely deadpan, "kosher lobster."

Jayhawker at Home

EIGHTY-THREE-YEAR-OLD ARTHUR CAPPER, who has just announced his retirement from the senatorial arena, will continue to be the U. S. A.'s most active Jayhawker. A Jayhawker, for those ignorant of Midwest terminology, was the name given loose-fingered gentry who, in the tough old days, rustled cattle and such on Kansas borders. Now every Kansan is a Jayhawker!

Since the Senator's Topeka home has been transformed into a Capper-owned radio station (WIBW), after leaving Washington he will hole into a suite in the Jayhawker Hotel. From this convenient eyrie, the Senator will supervise two radio stations, a total of 10 newspapers, including two dailies, The Household, a home magazine with country-wide circulation, Capper's Weekly, and a flock of farm journals.

Mild-mannered Arthur Capper, whose most explosive expressions are "Oh gee!" and "My heavens!" has another equally absorbing interest, the Capper Foundation and a convalescent home for crippled children. His interest in the crippled was aroused years ago when an employe's daughter was stricken with infantile paralysis. Today, thanks to the Senator, this same "girl" is a society editor on his Topeka Daily Capital. In between, hundreds of seriously handicapped children have been helped. "Doing" for crippled children has an added appeal for Senator Capper because he is a childless widower. His only family is a widowed sister, her daughter and three children.

Collector of Hearing Aids

THERE ARE, OF COURSE, innumerable stories going the rounds about Senator Capper. But we have never yet heard tell in print about his hearing aids. He is a mite deaf, simply hates to wear a hearing device, but can't resist buying every new model he sees advertised. He has collected about eight of 'em.

Each day he plays the same game with Miss Julia McKee, his secretary for 21 years, sneaking out of his office to a committee meeting or such minus his apparatus. Sometimes she catches him, sometimes he escapes, then she dogs him to the committee room, summons him outside.

He comes out sheepishly, meekly submits to having the hearing aid adjusted. Then, the next morning, he goes through the whole business all over again!

Miss Hsueh-Hsia Becomes Bride

Miss Lois Lee Hsueh-Hsia, daughter of Lee Wen Siang, official of the Chinese government, Sunday became the bride of Hwang Ying-Chen, in the rectory of St. Paul's Catholic Church in Washington. The Rev. E. J. Fontaine, pastor of the church, officiated at the ceremony and a reception followed at the home of Mme. Shang, wife of General Shang Chen, former head of the Chinese Military Mission to the United States, now chief of the Chinese Mission to Japan.

The bride was given in marriage by Dr. T. P. Hou, president of the Yungli Chemical Works of China, who came from New York where he is on his annual visit to the New York branch office. John Lu, secretary of the Institute of Chinese Culture, served as best man.

The bride wore a shell pink satin gown embroidered in seed pearls. A tiara held her fingertip veil of matching tulle and she carried a nosegay of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Theresa Loh of Shanghai, daughter of the late Loh Pa-Hung, outstanding Catholic leader of China, was the maid of honor. She wore a colorful Chinese print silk dress and carried a nosegay of varicolored flowers.

A native of Fukien Province, the bride came to the United States in 1939. She attended Yen China University, Peking, and received her A.B. degree from St. Elizabeth's College, Convent Station, N. J. She received her master's degree from Catholic University of America. For the last year she has been with the Washington office of the Chinese Ordnance Department.

The bridegroom was graduated in electrical engineering from the Chiao-Tung University in Shanghai. A year ago he came to the United States under the sponsorship of the Chinese Ministry of Economic Affairs to do research work at the National Bureau of Standards.

Following a brief honeymoon the couple wil llive at 2700 Q st.

About Hospital Thank You Gifts

Will you tell me the usual and proper way of tipping at a hospital? The nurses, of course, would not accept money, but is it customary to give a small present after three or four weeks of service? And what about attendants such as the maid who dusts, the girl in the diet kitchen who keeps things on ice for one, etc.? E. H. W.

Many people, following an illness, give some small gift to the nurse who has cared for them in appreciation for her thoughtfulness and devotion to duty. Such tokens are acceptable and appreciated. There's no set rule about tipping the hospital attendants you mention. Some people do so, however, especially if they have been attended by the same person during a lengthy stay in the hospital.

For several years I have made a living in New York by knitting such articles as bed jackets, wool throws, baby apparel, men's sport sweaters, etc. Having just recently arrived here, I am anxious to find an outlet for my work. Have you any suggestions? I. D. F.

We cannot suggest a specific shop that will offer you an immediate outlet for the sale of your handwork. However, there are a number of shops that might be interested if you take samples of your work and contact their buyers. As a start, I'd suggest looking under "Gift Shops" in the classified section of the telephone book and telephoning a number of shops to see whether they handle the sort of things you make. Usually, the small, privately owned shops in residential areas are more interested in handmade merchandise than the larger downtown shops.

I will take a few minutes from my morning's work to offer some suggestions to the couple who wrote you recently planning a trip to the West. First, to undertake such a trip with children so small is taking a big chance unless they are very sturdy. This winter, we took a motor trip to Mexico with our two boys, ages 5 and 9. We were gone five weeks and it was a pleasant experience we will relive for years. However, our boys were old enough to entertain one another in the car and enjoy the same type of meals we did. They were given various types of injections before we left and we carried a medicine case with us, stocked by the children's doctor. We took every precaution where their health was concerned.

I carried gifts wrapped, one for each day for each boy—enough for a week. I fastened a shoe bag to the back of the front seat and they kept their toys in the pockets. I also purchased at the drug store a jar of cleaning pads treated with skin freshener to clean them up before camping to eat, and found this a must. Another suggestion: The department stores now have a crib-playpen combination that folds up in a suitcase. Also the electric stores carry a small compact stove heated by a candle which could be used along the road to heat the baby's bottle. The only other suggestion I might have would be to stay home until the children are old enough to enjoy traveling. H.

"S. D. P.", whose letter appeared May 28, is welcome to call us if she would like to hear how my husband and I managed on several trips with the children. When our boys were 1 and 3½, we motored to a lodge near Pensacola, Fla. When they were 2 and 4½, we motored to Georgia, then down to Florida and back. When they were 3 and 4½, we motored to Georgia, then down to Florida and back. When they were 3 and 5½, we drove to South Carolina. We have also taken them on shorter trips, and when the younger child was 5 months, he was taken to Cleveland by train.

We thought your reply was very good but feel we can add to it. It never occurred to us to heat canned stuff on the engine, although we have seen families heat babies' bottles that way. The only thing in your advice that startled me was the suggestion that the baby be left in the car at night, if adjacent to the cabin. Cabins vary so (we always carry the AAA touring guide, which helps a lot) that I can visualize such procedure on some occasions but definitely not on others. M. H. L. C.

Movie Star's Beauty Comes From Design

By Ida Jean Kain

Let's go to the movies, teenagers. The star in the picture is so-o beautiful . . . look at those long eyelashes, that shining hair, and that perfect figure! (S-i-g-h) My, you wish you could have had a fairy godmother sitting in at your christening.

From where you sit, the girl up there on the silver screen is very lucky to have been born beautiful, and to have stepped right into a movie career. But let's go behind the scenes. Very few of them, perhaps two or three of the whole bunch, are "born beauties." And not one has had a career handed to her . . . she has worked for it, every step of the way.

Part of that beauty is an illusion. Any feature that falls short of perfection is given the glamour treatment, or photographed from the right angle. I daresay a battery of experts could make any girl look almost beautiful . . . provided she has a good figure and knew how to move with fluid grace.

Analyze what is most noticeable about the girl on the screen. It's her figure and the way she moves—neither of which is a trick of the camera. If the screen heroine appears slim and willowy, she is. The camera magnifies any figure flaws and plays up an ungraceful movement, mannerism or awkward walk.

When an actress looks like a dream walking, do you think it's all "natural"? It's as natural as she makes it with practice. She thinks about her posture and practices walking and moving until perfect movement is so much a part of her she can forget it and concentrate on her lines. She takes calisthenics to keep the waistline willowy and hips svelte . . . not just when the mood is on, but regularly. She brushes her hair daily. She does not stuff on sweets. And she keeps bright-eyed with enough sleep. In fact, one expert in charge of the training of young actresses said their schedule is so disciplined that the average girl would shudder at the thought of following it.

Not that you should make a career of being a beauty—when you should be studying your history lesson! But it is important for every teenage girl to aim to be nice enough looking to boost her own self-confidence. It removes a big stumbling block in the way of happiness. Many girls miss out because they either resent their lack of natural endowments and grow sullen, or become disheartened and resign themselves to being wallflowers. Any girl who makes the most of all her good points, and forgets about those that can't be changed, can be happy, very nice to look at—and still nicer to know.

The formula? From this day on, stand, sit, move and walk as if you were wearing a dress designed especially for you—say by Irene of Hollywood. That acting trick can work wonders, especially for your self-respect. Then, before you know it, this poised, confident manner is so much a part of you that you'll start living up to it. Until you try, you have no idea what this new "role" can do for you . . . never forget that all through your life you will be accepted at your own evaluation.

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Washington Post for Ida Jean Kain's Waist Whittling Diet.

TEEN-AGE Penny Edwards' perfect figure is by exercise design. This Warner Brothers starlet gives you an exercise test here. Practice until you can do the forward bend, hands down (be sure to touch palms)

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

No Wonder the Chinese Are Hungry

H. Dodson of 4657 S. 34th st., Arlington, Va., was very much interested in a recent Washington Post item about ECA funds for China. Especially the part that said:

"ECA expects to spend about 60 million dollars of the 33-million-dollar fund for industrial purposes. The rest will be used for food."

The printers appear to have dropped a vital cipher someplace along the line—no doubt on the theory that a zero is nothing to them.

MORE ABOUT ARLINGTON

After Memorial Day, I passed along the suggestion of a couple of old folks who had visited graves of their loved ones in Arlington National Cemetery. They found that they were required to do more walking than their age permitted.

Henry M. Lesser, vice commander of Fort Stevens Post 32 of the American Legion, promptly informed me that officers of his post are interested in bringing this subject to the attention of other organizations so that a coordinated plan can be considered for furnishing the required transportation for such visitors.

And Bill Juster of the Veterans Cab Co. (he drives No. 47) tells me that while the graybeards are making their plans, the boys who fought our most recent war are taking direct action.

Bill Starling, head man of the GI hackers, was informed that seven visiting Gold Star families would need transportation to the cemetery on Memorial Day.

He posted a notice and, in less than an hour, more than 50 Veteran drivers had volunteered to work for nothing on the holiday, to take those families to Arlington.

The cabs which got the assignment were Nos. 4, 70, 72, 98, 178, 201 and one unidentified Good Samaritan whose identity I couldn't learn. I think they all deserve a kind word the next time we get in their hacks.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two lovely kittens with fine family background." (Sligo 2388.)

PEACE, IT'S WONDERFUL

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, was delivering his 9 o'clock sermon last Sunday morning when the fire engines passed by outside.

The din was so overwhelming that the service had to be halted until the apparatus had departed from the neighborhood.

I mention the incident because I think it's characteristic of this bright new world of ours.

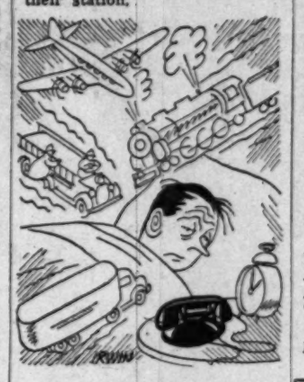
As you try to fall asleep some night, listen to the clamor which forces itself upon you.

A four-motored airplane struggles to gain altitude, and its roaring motors convey the impression that in the next instant the ship will be coming through your window.

The fire engines race past your door, their sirens and bells momentarily drowning out the neighbor's radio.

In the distance, a railroad engineer signals to his brakeman with four or five whistle blasts that would wake the dead.

The monster truck growling up the grade outside your window sets up a vibration that makes every pot in the kitchen rattle. And by that time, the fire engines are returning to their station.



So there's nothing left to keep you from falling asleep except the telephone—or the alarm clock, announcing that it's time to get up.

COMPLAINT DEPT.

Wright H. "Dutch" Swope of 638 6th st. ne. was pushing his Yellow Cab through traffic the other day and rehashing the war days with his fare.

"How about the women up there in the Aleutian Islands?" asked the passenger. Dutch snorted.

"Before we shipped out," he replied, "they told us there was a woman behind every tree in the Aleutians. When we got there, we found out there weren't any trees."

NEW YORK.—The puzzle now being whispered in Prague is "What's naked and weighs 90 pounds?" Answer: "A Czech, after the first five-year-plan." . . . Pepsi-Cola soon will have to change its "Nickle, Nickle, Nickle" theme, when the price goes to 6 cents . . . Irving Stone will be the advocate for Gov. Earl Warren, on the Town Meeting of the Air discussion: "Whom Should the Republicans Nominate?" Stone is the author of "They Also Ran," a book about presidential candidates who were defeated.

Alex Gard, the Sardi caricaturist who died suddenly last week, was in the Navy during the war and was assigned to do the murals for the movie theater at the Norfolk base. His murals showed a boatload of movie stars, with Jimm. Durante as the helmsman and Mae West among the rowers . . . The officer whose approval was necessary studied Miss West's figure and shook his head . . . "But, sir," Gard reminded him, "that figure pays her $12,000 a week" . . . The officer studied the ample figure again and suggested: "Let's reduce it—to, say $10,000 a week."

Paul Lockwood and Jim Hagerty, who accompanied their boss, Thomas E. Dewey, in his recent campaign tour in Oregon, explained Dewey's victory: "We went every place and spoke to as many people as we could. It was as if Dewey were running for the Board of Aldermen" . . . Lois Butler, the 17-year-old singer who plays the leading role in "Mickey," her first film, will be the recipient of a major publicity and advertising campaign. Eagle-Lion decided to concentrate on her, immediately after the first preview.

In the current issue of Newsweek Admiral William V. Pratt poses a unique question in discussing the Japanese. "Where," he asks, "can there be found such a racially pure, virile and determined people as in Japan?" Answer: On the beaches of Guadalcanal, Okinawa, Leyte, Iwo Jima, etc.

Wolcott Accused of Suppression

By Drew Pearson

Michigan's Congressman Jesse Wolcott, who has been bottling up the housing bill, thought he would show he was not anti-veteran by calling two witnesses to speak for the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He did this despite the fact that he had a telegram in his pocket officially repudiating the two witnesses. Signed by Merle Hopper, Michigan VFW commander, the telegram read:

"George Lyle and Arthur Greig purported to represent Michigan Department VFW on housing at your committee hearings. No one but myself is authorized to speak for VFW in Michigan on any subject before Congress."

Deliberately ignoring this protest from the VFW commander, Wolcott in effect deceived the public by putting Greig and Lyle on the stand to denounce low-cost housing for war vets. He also failed to mention that Greig and Lyle for a long time have been playing hand-in-glove with the real estate lobby in Detroit.

However, Representative Hale Boggs of Louisiana, himself a veteran, did not let Wolcott get away with this. He asked Lyle if the national VFW was for public housing. Knowing the answer was "yes," Wolcott had the nerve to try to interrupt Boggs. But the Louisianan persisted:

"I insist on an answer to my question as to whether the national VFW has indorsed this bill —yes or no."

Lyle finally had to admit that the Veterans of Foreign Wars favored passage of the housing bill and that he and Greig were speaking only for themselves. Chairman Wolcott looked very sick.

Hitler's Standards

In setting up the standards for admitting 200,000 displaced persons into the United States, the Senate approved some tricky language the other day aimed at excluding most Jews and Catholics. In so doing, the Senate actually accepted Hitler's yardstick in singling out those entitled to American refuge.

But what the Senators probably didn't realize is that their legal double talk may also get the United States into hot water on the diplomatic front, for the bill to admit displaced persons was worded in such a way as to give tacit recognition to the Soviet conquest of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The State Department has been careful not to recognize Russia's annexation of these tiny Baltic states, but the Senate bill requires that 50 per cent of the refugees permitted to enter the USA must come from a country that has been "annexed by a foreign power." This can only mean the three Baltic states swallowed by Russia.

The hidden purpose of this provision is to keep out Jews and Catholics, since there are none in Latvia, Estonia or Lithuania.

West Virginia's Republican Senator Chapman Revercomb, who championed these "Hitler amendments," fought down several attempts by Democratic Senators Howard McGrath of Rhode Island and Carl Hatch of New Mexico to liberalize the bill.

When Revercomb's bill finally reached the Senate floor, McGrath snorted in disguest: "The mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse."

Note—Senator William Langer, North Dakota Republican, pushed through an amendment which would admit 27,000 persons of German ethnic origin to this country every year. These are the Sudeten Germans who formed the fifth column for Hitler's expansion in Czechoslovakia.

Education Rollcall

Here are the Congressmen inside the House Education and Labor Committee who are bottling up the Federal-aid-to-education bill; also others who are for aiding the teachers:

Against the bill—Republicans: Schwabe, Missouri; Gwinn, New York; Kersten, Wisconsin; Owens, Illinois. Democrats: Lesinski, Michigan; Kelley, Pennsylvania; Kennedy, Massachusetts; Lucas, Texas.

For the bill—Republicans: Landis, Indiana; Hoffman, Michigan; McCowen, Ohio; Brehm, Ohio; Kearns, Pennsylvania; Nixon, California. Democrats: Barden, North Coralina; Fisher, Texas; Powell, New York; Wood, Georgia; Madden, Indiana; Klein, New York.

Republicans who would be for the bill if they had the courage to vote against the orders of Speaker Joe Martin and GOP Leader Halleck: Hartley, New Jersey; McConnell, Pennsylvania; Buck, New York; Smith, Kansas, and McKinnon, Minnesota.

In brief, a majority of the committee would be for Federal aid to education if the Republicans didn't follow their party leaders.

Besides the party-line issue, individual members of the committee have various reasons for opposing Federal aid to education.

One is that certain States would get a bigger proportionate share of benefits than they pay. For instance, New York and Massachusetts, which have progressive education systems, would pay more and get less out of the bill than States like Mississippi.

Another reason for opposition is religious. Democrats like Lesinski of Michigan, Kelley of Pennsylvania and Kennedy of Massachusetts want a clear stipulation that the State will take care of parochial schools in distributing Federal funds.

Peeve Affects Canada

Senator Chapman Revercomb, West Virginia Republican, is blocking a bill that would permit former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson to serve without pay as head of the joint United States-Canadian Defense Commission.

Acheson, whose resignation from the State Department was a great loss to American diplomacy, cannot take the post as long as his law firm does business with the United States Government. As a matter of routine, Senator J. Howard McGrath, Democratic National Chairman, drafted a bill exempting Acheson from this technicality. But Revercomb, peeved at McGrath over some differences on the displaced-persons problem, has taken out his peeve by refusing to pass the bill out of his Judiciary Subcommittee.

NEW Scientific Treatments Help You to GROW THICKER HAIR

E. W. FARRELL, Trichologist

Upon Nature's innate system of growth is based Hair Experts' specialized system . . . a plan that results in thicker hair NATURALLY grown and nurtured to full strength and virility with the aid or modern scientific formulae.

First, the scalp is thoroughly and professionally cleansed of its dandruff and other disorders, through special, gentle but effective germicides which penetrate below the skin surface to attack the source of the infection and then reopen clogged passages.

When the basic cause of the scalp trouble is routed, Hair Experts begin the rejuvenating treatments. After energizing the papilla to action, and then creating a fertile "field" for that growth, Hair Experts special formulae (scientifically created by and for them) stimulate the sub-scalp hair growth to normal, natural length, strength and thickness. Then sluggish blood circulation is normalized to flood the hair follicles with life-giving "food" for hair growth. Come in IMMEDIATELY for a free private scalp examination.
